What Is the "Middle East"?

What is "the Middle East" anyhow?

Without much question the most serious military crisis of 1956 likely will arise there.

As 1956 moves on into the month of two-faced Janus one may look back and see that as 1955 closed the situation there was worsening.

Peering ahead we see the strengthening of the gathering storm.

Russia, selling arms to Egypt, inflates it. The Soviets, by lavish attentions to Afghanistan and India, weakens Pakistan. That Moslem nation is the eastern bastion of the recent Baghdad Pact which includes Britain, Turkey, Iran, Iraq and Pakistan.

Egyptian influences succeeded in wrecking the British plan to bring Jordan into the pact. Terrorist riots forced the fall of the Jordan government. Jordan is almost a "kept" nation. Poor, lacking in resources, she has a fine little army subsidized by the British. That Jordan should have rioted so fanatically was a shock to Great Britain. It indicated a deeper Egyptian and Russian influence than was imagined.

Disintegration of Western strength and prestige has not yet run its course in the critical era.

What do we include in the "Middle East"?

Picture

The Middle East, geographically, largely is the Arabian peninsula. Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Bahrain, Masqat and Oman, the Aden Colony and protectorate, Cyprus, Egypt, Jordan, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Arab-Palestine, Israel, Sudan, Syria and Turkey generally are recognized as its membership.

In area it is about 3,731,000 square miles.

Its political range is from democracies such as Israel and Turkey to absolute monarchies, as in Saudi Arabia and Jordan. Between republics and democracies are oligarchies conducted by a handful of wealthy families, such as Syria, Iran, Iraq, Egypt, formerly a monarchy, now is a military dictatorship.

Its "geography" basically is a great semi-circular ridge of mountains and their valleys, forming roughly the interior of Turkey and Iran, supported by the Persian Gulf and the Mesopotamian and Syrian plains from the plateau of Arabia. This plateau slopes up to the highlands overlooking the Gulf of Aden and the Red Sea. On the other side of these are the Red Sea hills and Egyptian plains. The land lying between the mountains and the Syrian desert is known as the "fertile crescent." This, plus the Nile delta, is the only really good land.

The capacity to sustain life is low. The area, twice the size of India, supports only about 70 million persons, roughly 1/6th India's population.

Strategic

Chief importance of the area is strategic. It is a land bridge between three continents. Napoleon, the Kaiser of 1914 and Hitler knew that he who possessed it largely could nullify sea power. With Africa of increasing importance, the Middle East rises with it.

Influence of the Moslem religion, which dominates both North Africa and the Middle East, gives the two great important regions a strongly emotional kinship. Only in Syria and the Lebanon is there any substantial Christian population. Due largely to concentration there of American educational institutions the percentage of Christians is around 40 per cent, possibly 45 per cent in Syria. In both countries Christians are barred from holding any important office. Egypt and Russia make use of the Moslem tie to agitate in both areas.

Loss of its vital oil would paralyze much of Europe, Middle Eastern oil powers, the cities and industries of England, most of the factories and railroads of Western Europe, as well as those of India and South Africa. The United States imports from there.

Its history is the ancient, violent, cultural, spiritual. Of 21 present or past full-grown civilizations named by the historian Toynbee, 12 either originated in, or descended from, those which had origin there. Of surviving world religions, three, Judaism, Christianity and that of Islam, arose there.

It is an area of vast importance to the United States—as to Europe, Britain and Russia.

Griffin Asks Sale Of Jekyll or Swap For Atom Reactor

By M. L. ST. JOHN

Gov. Griffin told legislative leaders Monday to sell Jekyll Island "if we can get back the money the state has spent developing it."

"I would like to swap Jekyll Island for a science center for the University of Georgia or an atomic reactor," the governor told newsmen following his caucus with Senate and House leaders in his office.

SPENDING ESTIMATED

Griffin estimated the state has spent $3½ million on the island park.

The governor's conference on Jekyll came after the Legislative Economy Committee—which recently recommended disposing of all or part of the island—made its final report and dissolved itself. The economy group had criticized the Jekyll Island Authority's operations.

Griffin will discuss his first year in office when he delivers the "State of the State" address to the General Assembly at noon Tuesday.

ECONOMY SUMMATION

In its final report, the Economy Committee recommended an increase in the number of state troopers. It also urged passage of a law to prevent troopers from engaging in local law enforcement, directing them to confine their activities to patrolling highways. And it recommended reducing the 34 district patrol stations to 24 so as to put more men on the road.

The committee recommended transferring of Milledgeville State Hospital from the Welfare department to the Health department. It asked that present patients at the mental institution be screened so that doctors can concentrate on patients considered most likely to respond to treatment.

It recommended that the Factory for the Blind be made a training agency, with employment of blind persons limited to two years. The factory should not compete with private enterprise, the committee said.

FEDERAL AID

The state should cease participating in the federal aid (Hill-Burton) hospital building program, the committee asserted. However, it suggested that the state investigate whether it could obtain federal funds to build nursing homes for seniles and mental defectives.

It recommended greater use of prison labor at Battery Hospital.

The state purchasing agent should regain control of purchases.

War No Solution, Israel Resolves

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector, Jan. 9 (AP)—The Israeli Parliament by vote of 69-31 tonight endorsed the policy of Premier David Ben-Gurion and Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett that "maintenance of peace is better than victory in war."

Rejecting war as a solution of the Arab-Israeli crisis, Sharett said in a summing-up speech after a 10-hour debate:

"We must do everything to preserve peace and we are ready to take all possible steps in this direction—but whether this will be crowned with success is not dependent on us alone."

George Says Ike Illness Sapped Foreign Policy

By RUSSELL BAKER

(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Sen. George (D-Ga.) expressed misgivings today about the conduct of U.S. foreign policy since President Eisenhower's heart attack.

George, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and normally a champion of bipartisanship in foreign affairs, said the President's illness had "contributed very greatly" to the fact that "our foreign policy is not in a very happy state at this time."

Since the President's "unfortunate illness," he said, there has not been "a very positive attitude" toward the Soviet Union's new tactics.

Sen. George was interviewed at the Capitol for a radio program recorded for broadcast tonight.

Only inferentially could George's comments be construed as criticism of Secretary of State Dulles, who was primarily responsible for foreign policy during the President's relative inactivity.

In the last session of Congress, George and Dulles were exceptionally close in their working relationships and the Georgian was the strongest bulwark in Congress for administration foreign policy.

He did not mention Dulles by name today. Nor did he advocate any departure from the policy of bipartisanship on basic foreign policy. He repeated, however, his recently enunciated argument that "constructive criticism" could only be "helpful."

Bank Bandits Scoop $25,000, Miss Vault

SAUGUS, Mass., Jan. 9 (AP)

Two masked gunmen robbed the Saugus Trust Co. of approximately $25,000 today after holding a dozen customers and 11 employees at bay with automatic pistols.

The holdup occurred 15 minutes before the bank vault was set to open by time clock. The money taken was scooped up from several tellers' cages.

Fear School Padding, Ask Surprise Audits

By MARJORY SMITH

The Georgia Board of Education called Monday for "surprise audits" of public schools over the state after hearing evidence that some schools are padding attendance rolls to obtain more state aid.

Legislature Given Cook's NAACP Data

Atty. Gen. Cook Monday transmitted to the Legislature "for appropriate action" what he described as evidence compiled by his department "of the subversive influence on and in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and like organizations."

The photostatic record making up some 400 pages was sent to Lt. Gov. Vandiver, presiding officer of the Senate, and Rep. Marvin Moore, speaker of the House.

Cook charged that the NAACP and "like organizations" are "agitating for the abolition of Georgia's constitutional and statutory provisions requiring segregation of the races" and, in so doing, are fomenting strife and discord between the white and Negro races in this state.

His report to the Legislature, he said, followed the same line as an address he made to the Peace Officers Assn. of Georgia here Oct. 13. At that time, there was speculation that a legislative move might be in the making to ban the NAACP from Georgia. The attorney general did not broach such a proposal Monday.

Inspectors will work out of the State Department of Education "like bank auditors or postal inspectors," board spokesmen explained. Dr. Collins told the board, "I'm for anything that will break up this padding; padding is stealing."

Rainier Agrees To U.S. Wedding

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 9 (AP)

The personal chaplain of Prince Rainier III of Monaco said today that the prince hopes to marry actress Grace Kelly in the United States "in deference to his bride, her family and the American people."

The statement from the prince's chaplain, the Very Rev. J. Francis Tucker, came after a Monaco palace official in Monte Carlo announced that the celebrated nuptials would take place in the Riviera principality.

Tucker, however, quoted the prince as saying final wedding plans had not been set.

Virginia Private School Plan Voted; Segregation Bills in Georgia Senate

Easy Passage Expected for Full Program

By ALBERT RILEY

The first of a series of bills to strengthen segregation in Georgia will begin moving through the State Senate Tuesday as the 1956 General Assembly convenes for its second day.

Lt. Gov. Vandiver said all the administration's segregation bills will be introduced first in the Senate. Little or no opposition is expected on any of them.

SEGREGATE SCHOOLS

Although most of the bills will seek to preserve segregated schools, the first two to be introduced will deal with public parks.

One of the bills will authorize the state, counties or municipalities to "sell, lease, grant, exchange or otherwise dispose of" public parks, playgrounds, golf courses, swimming pools or other "public use properties."

It follows close on the heels of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling banning segregation on public golf courses in Atlanta.

PROPERTY CLOSED

A companion bill would make it a misdemeanor for any person to enter any state-owned or operated property which has been closed by order of the governor or a state departmental head.

Six bills recommended by the Georgia Education Commission will be introduced later to implement the so-called "private school" plan to preserve segregation.

Speaker Marvin Moore set the stage for segregation bills in the House when he said that "not since the days of the carpetbagger and the Reconstruction" have such vital problems faced the Legislature.

DEMAND SOLUTION

They cannot be ignored but demand prompt solution, he said, and warned, "Failure to solve these problems is fraught with danger we dare not even contemplate."

However, there were signs that the Griffin administration may go slow on pushing adoption of a "nullification" principle to declare "null and void" in Georgia the U.S.

The weatherman says Atlantans will find it continued cold Tuesday and Wednesday. Skies will be mostly fair, and there will be some wind, he added.

Tuesday extremes in Atlanta should be 25 and 45. Extremes Wednesday are predicted at 25 and 48. Atlanta extremes Monday were 23 and 44.

Harvey, Other Parolee Identified In Columbus Kidnap, Rob Attempt

Leland Harvey and a second paroled convict Monday were identified in the kidnaping of a Ft. Benning soldier and his wife and the attempted robbery of a Columbus drug store where the wife was employed, police said.

DeKalb Police Lt. R. A. Boone said the kidnap-robbery occurred Saturday night only a few hours before Harvey, 49, and William Eugene Smith, 36, were arrested here. Boone said both the soldier and his wife identified the two men in a police lineup.

Gilbert H. Gibson, president of the Vidalia Banking Co., which was robbed of $15,000 on Jan. 2, also viewed the two men in a lineup. The FBI, which is investigating the bank robbery, did not say whether Gibson identified Harvey and Smith.

Ike Couples Soil Bank To Surplus Sales Plan

By WILLIAM M. BLAIR

(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—President Eisenhower called today for a $1,000,000,000 soil bank to pay farmers for growing smaller crops and producing soil fertility. The aim would be to cut surplus output and stiffen farm prices and income.

This expected proposal was the major point of a nine-point program laid before Congress to stem the five-year decline in the farm economy. "Unless corrected," the President asserted, "these economic reversals are a direct threat to the well-being of all our people."

Republican leaders of the House and Senate hailed the President's program as a sound approach to farm ailments, although some doubted it held any hope for bolstering farm income in this election year.

Democratic leaders also doubted its immediate effect and generally said the administration's sights were set too low. Senate Democratic Leader Johnson set the tone for his party by promising bipartisan consideration but added that the President's plan "fails to meet the emergency situation confronting American farmers."

While the President foresaw aid to farmers this year if Congress acts quickly, farm state members of Congress viewed the program as offering little support of farm income before the presidential and congressional elections. Noticeable improvement, they said, appeared only in the long run.

Sen. George criticized some specific proposals in the message but said he believed "on the whole the approach is very good." He predicted, however, that con-

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—President Eisenhower's recommendation for replacing acreage allotments on cotton with quantity allotments beginning with the 1957 crop drew sharp criticism from Georgia lawmakers here today.

Rep. Paul Brown of Elberton voiced the sentiments of most delegation members:

"Changing production from an acreage allotment to the number of bales a farmer may produce won't work out satisfactorily. The soil bank idea also won't help the little farmer. The big operators will be the ones to benefit from this."

Sen. George criticized some specific proposals in the message but said he believed "on the whole the approach is very good." He predicted, however, that con-

Citizens 2-1 For Altering State Charter

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 9 (AP)—Virginia voters gave an emphatic push today to a plan aimed at preventing compulsory mixing of the races in public schools.

By a margin of more than 2-1 they directed the General Assembly to call a convention to amend the state constitution so state money may be used for tuition grants in private nonsectarian schools.

A number of sections chalked up record votes in a statewide turnout surpassed only by the 620,000 recorded by the Eisenhower landslide in Virginia in 1952. It was a decisive go-ahead for the first step on a plan recommended by a study commission that includes pupil assignment for reasons other than race as well as the tuition grants.

EXCEEDS PREDICTION

Both advocates and opponents of the convention call predicted the issue would carry with a margin of about 3-2.

But southside Virginia—where the Negro population is heaviest and anti-integration feeling the strongest—rolled up lopsided margins for the convention. Northern Virginia, where the opposition strength was massed, went against the plan as forecast but in strength far short of that needed to balance the downstate luge.

Returns from 1,677 of the state's 1,862 voting places gave the convention call 287,858, while 136,110 were against it.

HAILED BALLOT

Gov. Thomas B. Stanley hailed the result as something "of tremendous assistance" to the Legislature in dealing with school problems.

The tuition grant plan was a key recommendation of Stanley's Commission on Public Education headed by State Sen. Garland Gray of Waverly. Under the "local option" proposal, grants would be made available to parents who object to sending their children to racially integrated schools.

Another principal recommendation of the commission, composed of 32 state legislators, calls for an "assignment plan" under which local school authorities would be empowered to assign pupils to schools on various grounds other than race. It comes before the General Assembly which convenes Wednesday.

There was no immediate word from opponents of the constitutional call, headed by State Sen.-elect Armistead Boothe, who rallied the

Ike Decision Against Race Almost Made, Top Solons Feel

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—The preponderance of professional political opinion in Congress today was that President Eisenhower had now all but made a final decision not to stand for reelection.

This informal estimate was disputed only among the hard core of the original "Eisenhower men," and not even by all of them.

For example, Rep. W. Sterling Cole (R-NY) took the thus far unexampled course of publicly declaring a belief not only that the President would not be a candidate again but that she should not.

HINT IN FLORIDA

These expressions followed the President's hint yesterday at his Key West news conference that he had reached a subject-to-be decision on seeking reelection. Also in the background was his mention there of the "critical" and "rather startling" effects any unexpected change in government during a president's term might have on this country and the world.

Principal manifestations in Congress were these:

1. A quickening of interest in the approaching presidential contest among the Democrats, who felt that their party's chances in November were now rising.

OPEN CONVENTION

2. A stirring among the conservative and right-wing Republicans at the prospect that the Republican National Convention in August might now be a good deal more open than they had thought.

Friends of the Senate Republican leader, William F. Knowland of California, assumed, for example, that he was not reasonably sure to be a considerable factor at the convention.

It had been disclosed last Oct. 29 that Knowland would be a candidate if President Eisenhower did not stand again, and on Dec. 8 it had been disclosed further that Knowland was prepared to run in any case unless the President announced his own availability by the end of this month.

By WILLIAM S. WHITE
(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)

Knowland's friends felt tonight that his candidacy was practically assured and the President had made the first installment on a clear declaration of intent not to run.

Rep. Cole, in a speech put into the Congressional Record, called on his Republican colleagues to cease entreating a President who was "of admittedly uncertain health" to run.

While the President no doubt could be reelected, Cole said, it was "not fair to Dwight Eisenhower to appeal to his sense of duty to run again and it is not for the best interest of the country that he attempt a second term."

BECAUSE OF DUTY

"Te (the President) will not," Cole went on, "because of the very sense of duty that is synonymous with his name. He will transcend the immediate and, in an ultimate act of patriotism, step down for the country's good."

"To ask him to do otherwise is to belie his sense of duty and it is unfair to him personally."

President Eisenhower already had given 41 years of his life to public service, Cole declared, and had "given it unstintingly, proudly, willingly, industriously, effectively, yes, gloriously."

"What is the limit of a man's patriotic duty?" Cole asked. "Does the superior quality of his leadership condemn him forever to its burdens?"

"Will the nation not be content with 41 years of a man's life in public service, or do we demand all of it?"

"Already the pressures are being built up to deny Dwight Eisenhower the well-earned right to lay aside the mantle of state with a sense of duty fully done. My sense of Christian charity prompts me to forgive all those who would take advantage of Dwight Eisenhower's sense of duty in this way because I am sure they do so not in selfishness but in what they conceive to be in the best interest of our country."

WILL BE ENOUGH?

"As a partisan, it would serve the short-term interest of my party to have our great leader once again at the head of the ticket. But as a Republican it would be to substitute expediency for right, politics for principle."

GREATEST DOUBT

Even among the original Eisenhower backers, it was conceded that the President's remarks yesterday in Key West would by ordinary political interpretation be read to mean at minimum that there was the greatest doubt that he would consent to renomination. But no such reading necessarily followed in this particular case, they contended, simply because the President in approaching many of his decisions had habitually left at one time or another strong impressions that he was not going to do what eventually he did.

The orthodox Republicans, who are ready to support the President's renomination if he wishes to accept but are quite prepared otherwise to turn in another direction, wholly rejected this kind of reasoning.

Many of them had never believed since the President's heart attack that he was likely to run again and they regarded the things he had said yesterday in Key West as close to final proof they had been right.

Ike, Warmed by Dixie Stay, Toils in Icy D.C.

By W. H. LAWRENCE
(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—President Eisenhower moved back into a regular working routine in an ice-covered White House today.

Back from a 12-day holiday in the warm sun of south Florida, he was at his desk for six hours at the start of a crucial five-week testing period that will show how his healing heart will react to a full work load. He was ready, for the first time since his Sept. 24 heart attack, to resume the full burdens of his office.

In deference to his doctors, he kept his calling list short. He interrupted his work day with a two-hour rest period between noon and 2 p.m. Frigid winds bearing sleet kept the mercury below freezing, and made it unwise for the President to venture outside for any kind of exercise.

These were the highlights of his day:

1. He sent a special message urgently requesting new farm legislation from Congress.

2. He recalled to duty his appointment secretary, Bernard M. Shanley, who resigned while the President was ill to resolve "some pressing personal problems" during the recent period of relative inactivity at the White House.

3. He sent to the Senate lists of 155 nominations for confirmation. Most of these were recess appointments announced during the period when Congress was not in session. Reflecting an effort to cut his work load, these appointments were grouped so as to require only 10 signatures by the President, instead of individual signatures as was frequently the case in the past.

4. He called Republican congressional leaders to meet with him at 9 a.m. tomorrow, resuming the regular weekly sessions held during the period when Congress is here.

5. He worked for several hours on his economic message to Congress which he will send up on Jan. 23. He met for an hour with Arthur F. Burns, chairman of his Council of Economic Advisers.

6. He prepared to send a special message on education to Congress later this week, perhaps Thursday or Friday.

7. He called the National Security Council to meet with him Thursday, and said he would hold a regular cabinet meeting either Friday or Monday, depending on the week-end travel plans of other officials.

8. Through his press secretary, James C. Hagerty, he announced probable plans to resume regular news conferences in Washington next week.

9. He conferred at length with his principal advisers.

AMA JOURNAL RAPS POLL

Doctors had been advised by the Journal of the American Medical Assn. that the questionnaire "should be tossed into the waste basket" to prevent "the hysteria such information could foment."

The poll was conducted for the magazine by the research organization of Benson & Benson, Inc., of Princeton, N.J., which sent out its questionnaires under the letterhead of the American Research Foundation.

The name of the foundation's client was not made public until U.S. News & World Report published the results. These showed that 275 doctors, or about 62 per cent, replied, although some of them did not give direct answers to both the basic questions.

THE TWO QUESTIONS

Here are the two questions asked and the replies, as given by the magazine:

"Based on what you have read about the nature of the President's illness, and assuming a normal convalescence in the next few months, do you think Mr. Eisenhower can be regarded as physically able to serve a second term?" Yes: 141, or 60.3 per cent; No: 93, or 39.7 per cent.

"Do you think a man who has suffered a heart attack can be regarded as physically able to serve a term as president?" Yes: 152 or 64.4 per cent; No: 84, or 35.6 per cent.

Jordan Gets New Premier, Cracks Down on Rioters

AMMAN, Jordan, Jan. 9 (AP)—A new government took over in Jordan today under royal injunction to stamp out disorder and clean up "disturbing elements," including civil service employees who have kept the country in an uproar over the Baghdad pact.

American and official sources said the 14,000-man Arab Legion, Jordan's crack army, was in firm control and the country calm after a weekend of rioting and demonstrations. Only minor demonstrations were reported today. One included the stoning of an American Quaker hospital at Ajloun in eastern Jordan.

(During the disorders, the State Department in Washington reported, the U. S. Marine guard fired in the air Saturday and with other personnel repelled a mob attack on the U. S. consulate in the Jordan-administered section of Jerusalem.)

(Washington officials and a British Foreign Office spokesman charged that money was paid by Communist sources to foment the anti-pact disorders and that there were indications Egyptian and Saudi Arabian sources had a hand in encouraging them.)

All Americans were reported safe, including the 300 who normally live in Amman. Many lived here in the Philadelphia Hotel, partly burned Saturday.

The new premier is Samir el Rifai, a deputy premier in the outgoing government who changed places with Ibrahim Hashem. Hashem, Premier of a caretaker regime that had promised to stay out of pacts and hold a new general election in four months, resigned Saturday and now becomes deputy premier.

64 Killed In Algerian Rebel Raids

Toll Is Highest
In 15 Months

ALGIERS, Algeria, Jan. 9 (UP)—French authorities reported today that 64 persons were killed in bloody clashes with nationalist rebels Sunday.

The total was one of the highest for a single day since the "Army of Allah" launched the growing disorders 15 months ago. French forces killed 39 and captured 62 prisoners. The rebels killed 25 persons.

Two persons were slain when the rebels stormed a French factory only three miles from Constantine.

The rebels killed 23 Moslems at various places because of their sympathies for the French. In the Constantine department, rebels burned 10 farms, two schools, two railway depots and drove off cattle.

They kidnaped a dozen Moslem workers, including a family with two children, and authorities feared the children may have been killed.

The French killed 18 rebels in ambushes in the Ain Abid region, 25 miles east of Constantine.

Adlai Wins Powerful N.Y. Backing

NEW YORK, Jan. 9 (AP)—Adlai Stevenson's New York backers formally lined up behind him today with the formation of a "Stevenson for President Committee."

They also raised the possibility of a showdown battle with Gov. Averell Harriman for Democratic National Convention delegates in the big New York 98-vote delegation.

"We have no present plans for entering the primary," said co-chairman Thomas K. Finletter of the committee, "but that doesn't exclude the possibility. We are hoping very much that it will not be necessary."

As for aspirations by the Harriman camp that the governor will be the favorite son candidate of the New York delegation, Finletter, former Air Force secretary, said:

"I doubt very much if the delegation will go solidly for Mr. Harriman."

The statements apparently put it up to the governor to either drop his favorite son role or face the possibility of a knock-down drag-out battle with a pro-Stevenson faction that includes some of the state's top Democrats.

12th AF Orders Fat Fliers Down

RAMSTEIN, Germany, Jan. 9 (AP)—The U.S. 12th Air Force today ordered fat fliers to trim down their waistlines—or be grounded.

Maj. Gen. Robert M. Lee, commander of the 12th, said in a letter to personnel in Germany and France:

"Since medical evidence indicates that overweight is an important factor in degenerative disease processes, this physical defect is considered to compromise performance of duty and, therefore, will not be waived by this headquarters."

Fliers and ground personnel must pare down to weights prescribed in the Air Force manual for their height and age group.

Ford Cautions Stock Buyers Not To Expect Quick Riches

(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Henry Ford II today cautioned the public not to expect to get rich quick by buying Ford stock.

"I think some people are indulging in wishful thinking about their chances for fast and fabulous financial gains," said the president of the Ford Motor Co.

"After considering the mail I have received, reading press accounts and listening to the opinions of informed persons, I am concerned about the evidence in some areas of a naive belief in industrial miracles."

Ford said his company was up against the "stiffest kind of competition" and that 1956 was not likely to be as good a year as 1955 in the automobile business.

He refused to estimate how many cars and trucks Ford would produce this year.

"It is my personal belief we will have a good year in 1956," he said, "but I don't know for sure and I don't think any of my colleagues do either."

The Ford statement was made before more than 1,000 securities dealers meeting in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Commodore.

They were there as prospective underwriters of the Ford stock sales set for a week from Wednesday.

SEES IT AS DUTY

Ford said he held it a "duty to speak soberly about the stock offering."

"I hope, of course," he said, "that ownership in the company will be shared by great numbers of peoples as a result of this proposed stock offering. I believe in the future of our country, the long-term growth of our industry and Ford's ability to participate in that growth. Nevertheless, I hope you will consider this word of caution in your discussions with prospective investors, particularly the small investor and the new investor. We at Ford are not miracle men but businessmen."

Miss. Stations To Stay Segregated, Towns Say

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 9 (AP)—Officials of several Mississippi towns said today their railroad and bus stations will remain segregated despite a federal ruling against segregating interstate passengers.

Jackson police put up segregation signs in the railroad station and a bus station today to enforce Mississippi's segregation laws.

Policemen will be stationed at the Illinois Central Railroad depot to enforce the city's stand if they are needed, Police Chief W. D. Rayfield said.

Some other Mississippi city officials said they would take similar action if necessary.

Laurel, Gulfport and Greenwood are among cities which said train and bus stations will remain segregated.

The Interstate Commerce Commission ordered an end to segregated waiting rooms for interstate passengers. The order goes into effect tomorrow. It does not apply to passengers traveling only within a state.

(Union Station in Atlanta has already taken down segregation signs, according to Station Manager J. N. Neal. Atlanta Terminal Station still had the signs up Monday night. President Herbert W. Bonduant of Terminal could not be reached for comment.)

Both the Greyhound and Trailways bus stations still displayed waiting room signs. "We are still waiting on instructions," a Trailways spokesman said.

The Jackson order against integration will apply to all passengers, whether interstate or intrastate.

Arkansas Judge Halts Segregation Backers

JONESBORO, Ark., Jan. 9 (AP)—U. S. District Judge Albert L. Reeves today made permanent a restraining order prohibiting pro-segregation forces from interfering with operation of the racially integrated public schools at nearby Hoxie.

Judge Reeves, in effect, also declared Arkansas' law requiring segregation in public schools to be in violation of the U. S. Constitution.

City police put up their own—large white signs with black letters, attached to heavy metal stands.

The signs read: "Waiting room, white only," or "Waiting room, colored only." They are signed "By order police department."

Today on Peachtree

Double Identity

We expect wacky goings-on at Christmastime in this bustling emporium. And how they do go on. But the wackiest, for our money, was an odd coincidence that couldn't possibly happen—but did on the day before Christmas Eve. Our Iris Lee girl, on the trail of an unusual (we'll say!) gift for a customer, dialed the Gift Shop, on the Third Floor. The phone rang frantically several times before a bright, cheery voice answered: "Gift Shop, may I help you?" The first voice said: "I'm Iris Lee. Do you have a plastic rose-petal that's a tea bag?" With many a quiver of the vocal chords at this request-to-end-requests, the second voice replied: "I'm ex-Iris Lee—Mariana Knox; hold on and I'll find out." Which she promptly did. Mariana, in case anybody in Atlanta doesn't remember, was the capable head of our Iris Lee for many years. She is now Assistant Vice President of the Citizens & Southern Bank. "Answering that phone was pure reflex," she explained. "I was Christmas shopping, but when I heard it ringing I just had to pick it up—like an old firehorse when the alarm sounds, I guess."

Our Kingdom for a Crown

Wouldn't you know it would happen last Wednesday, a few minutes before our gorgeous guest star, Sloane Simpson, was due on stage to emcee the Jo White Fashion Show? The Fashion Mezzanine, naturally, was jumping with customers. Suddenly, a plump, pretty matron browsing through the dress racks clapped her hand over her mouth and squealed: "It's gone! I've lost my Crown!" Our salesgirl, visions of an emerald and ruby orb dancing in her head, was about to get down on her knees to search for the gem when the lady opened her mouth and pointed to a yawning gap where a front tooth ought to be. "It was my Hollywood tooth," she wailed; "just like they make for the movie stars!" Then began a needle-in-a-haystack hunt that all but stalled traffic. Janitors moved in with dustpans and flashlights; service managers, salespeople, even obliging customers, cased every inch of space in what proved to be a fruitless and frustrating search. If you happen to happen on a dazzling white, diamond-bright crown (tooth, not tiara size), please notify Davison's Lost and Found. But don't strain your eyes. Our friend finally figured she must have swallowed her tooth while she was eating chewy chocolate candy.

P.S.—In that case, Ma'am, we suggest you see your dentist at once.

Make Haste Slowly On This Question

Word from the state capitol is that the administration plans to go slow on pushing the nullification principle, a device being proposed as a means of maintaining segregation.

This seems a wise decision. At best the idea a state may nullify a decision by the Supreme Court can be nothing more than a delaying action. It might prove effective enough to produce a substantial delay of a good many months. But that a state can nullify a constitutional decision by the court, while an untested theory, cannot be accepted as a valid possibility.

If states could refuse to accept any and all decisions by the court which did not meet with their approval, the processes of government soon would disintegrate.

The administration is wise to flash the slow sign.

The problem, involving the future of public education in Georgia, is one which will affect generations unborn. Monday's news is encouraging if it means the complex and emotional problem is to be faced and discussed calmly.

Every parent with a child or children to educate is entitled to a calm, judicious debate. So are the industrial and religious interests of the state whose future also will be affected by whatever decision is made.

Suitable 'Press Gallery' Is a Sound Proposal

Georgia's Senate yesterday introduced a sound resolution calling upon the Rules Committee to provide a "suitable" press gallery for the newspapers of the state which cover its proceedings. The resolution was introduced with high and sincere praise for the press by Sens. Harrison and Millican and others affirmed it.

The idea is, said the resolution, to eliminate as much confusion as possible on the floor. It will not go into effect until next year.

It is a good idea. We assume the House will, as it should, follow suit as soon as a study can be made and plans provided.

Since newspapers, radio and TV are all concerned, we would like to point out to the committees which will work out the plans that the Senate and House press galleries in Washington are close by the speaker's stand in each House. In the Georgia House chamber, for example, the existing public galleries are too far away to permit accurate coverage by the press.

Since the press galleries will not be ready or required before next January, there is ample time to do a good job. But the idea is a good one and we endorse it.

There would be even less confusion when 1957 arrives if, with the press in its galleries, all unauthorized personnel could be kept off the floor of both houses, especially the lobbyists who annually are such a plague.

Mr. Cravey's Proposal Has One Good Aspect

Zack Cravey, whose office is in charge of enforcement of the Georgia Industrial Loan Act, says in a letter to the governor he is willing for the law to be administered by some other agency but urges that no changes be made in it for at least one more year.

This brought a rejoinder from Sen. Everett Millican, of Fulton, that the offer was "the opening gun to try to see that no amendments are made to the law at this legislative session."

Mr. Millican may have made a rather excellent guess of the commissioner's motives. At any rate, Mr. Cravey's best suggestion is that some other agency—or a new agency set-up for that purpose—be named to administer the law. The Commissioner of Insurance and just about everything else has far too many regulatory agencies under his control—more in fact than any one man reasonably could handle.

It has been conceded by everybody—including reputable small loan firms—that a uniform law governing the field is necessary. Such a law should permit reputable firms to stay in business while eliminating the unscrupulous operators from the small loan and consumer finance field.

It is admitted that small loan firms charge justifiably higher interest rates than banks because their costs are higher. Costs of investigating an applicant for a loan of $100 sometimes run as high as for a $1,000 loan made by a bank. Collection costs are also in that proportion and losses are high.

But as pointed out by Sol. Gen. Paul Webb of Fulton County and Sen. Millican, it could not have been the intent of the Legislature to permit lenders to become agents for unlimited tie-in sales of high-cost insurance as some of them have become. Others sell limited amounts and some none at all.

The lenders themselves admitted when the law was passed that it was a "start" in a field that badly needed regulating. If such amendments are needed, now is the time to consider them. A workable regulatory agency certainly is needed—an agency independent of political pressures as Mr. Cravey's office certainly is not.

Ike Offers to Farmers A 'New Deal' Package

President Eisenhower's farm message, read to Congress Monday, must have delighted all the more rabid New Dealers of the 30s.

The chief plank in it is Henry Wallace's old soil bank plan. Under it the farmers would be paid to leave land idle. This idea of that era was declared unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The President calmly repudiates the old Benson plan without so much as mentioning it had been marked for the wastebasket. The total bill for relief of sagging farm incomes would add up to more than a billion dollars. The items listed for "relief" include gasoline tax refunds and other aids which will make the more radical New Dealers gnash their teeth in envy.

Many of the items are lifted from the Democratic blueprints and they understandably are upset about it.

The soil bank plan will not work to reduce surpluses unless it takes into account the fact that use of fertilizers, new and more prolific seeds—especially the hybrids—allow for doubling production on less acreage.

The billion-dollar New Deal farm message was more than anything else an admission that a President will be elected next November.

Shakespeare, Marlowe, Or Might It Be Bacon?

Scholars still are rattling old, old bones in an effort to prove the plays and verse of William Shakespeare were written by somebody else.

There are the Baconites and the Marloweites, each positive that their entry was the true author and Shakespeare himself just a front man.

Those who believe all those enduring lines were written by Francis Bacon have been fairly quiet of late, but the backers of Christopher Marlowe have been exceedingly active.

Their most recent move was to obtain permission to open the tomb of Thomas Walsingham, an Elizabethan patron of the arts and of Marlowe in particular. Their theory is that Walsingham arranged the deal by which Shakespeare posed as the author of Marlowe's works. Their hope is that in the tomb is evidence of what may be history's greatest literary hoax.

Permission to disturb the tomb was granted by the Diocese of Rochester only after the Marloweites presented their case. Briefly it is this: The witty and brilliant Marlowe was not killed in a tavern brawl as history would have it. The victim was another man but Kalsingham and his friends pretended that it was Marlowe in order to protect the poet from the queen's government which suspected him of treason.

Officially dead, but very much alive, Marlowe continued to produce plays and verse. A down-on-his-luck hack from Stratford-on-Avon was hired to palm off Marlowe's works as his. Thus Shakespeare gained the reputation as one of the greatest masters of English ever to live. Marlowe presumably died quietly under an alias, and the fame which should be his belongs to another.

All this is interesting, but no longer of consequence to the men whose reputations are involved. And after all these years it would take direct word from them to change public opinion in the matter.

As either Bacon, Marlowe, or Shakespeare said:

"What's in a name?"

Sylacauga (Ala.) News

There is no denying the fact that the recent ruling by the United States Supreme Court had a violent impact upon the tradition, and customs of certain sections of the country, but we are confident that under intelligent leadership it is not an unsolvable problem. Social problems are by-products of an age. They neither weld nor separate church and state; they are not civic in their entirety nor can they be solved by political upheaval of treatise. Social problems are problems of mankind and with mankind rests their solution.

There is room for all of us in Abraham's bosom, so there must be room for all of us here on earth.

Why Not Appreciate Our Peace Officers As We Do Musicians and Other Notables?

Rome—Policemen, like doctors, lawyers and successful craftsmen must continue to study if they would keep abreast of the ever-increasing complexities of modern living.

Peace officers today face many more problems and varied tasks than ever before. We of the public should realize that law enforcement has grown to the point where it is a profession. Our high schools should teach a course in law enforcement appreciation just as they do music appreciation.

We should appreciate the efforts and efficiencies of our peace officers just as we marvel at superb craftsmanship in a fine watch, an expensive automobile or a modern home.

Elements of police science could be helpful if taught as elective subjects in high school.

We should realize that a Mountie in Canada's wild north country, a Ranger on the vast plains of Texas, or a plainclothesman on a dangerous undercover detail or just a plain city cop methodically pounding a well-worn beat are all aiming at the same results—peace, harmony and justice.

Modern Music Trend Considered Deplorable

Palmyra, N.Y.—The public undoubtedly remembers such beautiful songs of high quality and taste as "Beautiful Ohio," "In a Little Spanish Town," "Harbor Lights" and many more that were popular through the years.

The latest bebop, jazz and so-called cool cat music is a disgrace to the country and surely can't be classified as popular by any listener.

Did Halftime Speech Slight Pittsburgh?

Gadsden, Ala.—It seems to me that Col. Blake Van Leer could have taken a few seconds in his halftime speech over television to mention that Georgia Tech was glad to have Pittsburgh as an opponent or something to that effect.

Pittsburgh's president told the nationwide audience that they were proud to be playing a team and a school of Georgia Tech's caliber, but Col. Van Leer spent all of his time bragging about Georgia Tech.

Mr. Lausche Is Frank All Right

As a run-of-the-week sort of thing, this corner stays clear of politics. But when a politician comes into my living room on a Sunday evening and admits he voted for the candidate of the other party, then I think he is worthy of honorable mention. Especially when the man is a Democrat governor and a possible candidate for the presidency or the vice presidency.

I'm talking about Frank J. Lausche, five times governor of Ohio, on "Meet the Press."

The persistent Lawrence Spivak had asked him if it were true that in 1952 he voted for Republican Robert A. Taft for the U.S. Senate. Although the Ohio governor took the long way, he finally came around to saying, "Mr. Spivak, if anyone said I did not vote for Bob Taft it would not be true."

Mr. Lausche said, too, he considers welfare of country more important than welfare of party. He's one of the least evasive, frankest men I've seen on the Sunday night supertime grill show.

Frank Lausche may never be either the nation's No. 1 or No. 2 nominee. But when it comes to honest answers, he gets the green stamps.

It is, indeed, a golden anniversary that is being celebrated at the National Geographic Society. Fifty years ago, when there were three persons on the Geographic's staff, John Oliver La Gorce took a job with the young scientific society.

Now he is its president and the editor of its distinguished magazine. Instead of three employees there are 900 and instead of a few thousand subscribers the National Geographic magazine goes to over two million subscribers the world over. In recognition of his 50th year with the society, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, former president and editor and now chairman of the society's board of trustees, today will present Dr. La Gorce with the Grosvenor Medal for "outstanding service to the increase and diffusion of geographic knowledge."

Like Dr. Grosvenor, Dr. La Gorce long has been recognized and honored as one of the architects of the society. As a forceful leader whose interests have extended to every corner, Dr. La Gorce has truly helped in the diffusion of geographic knowledge.

Fear Often Causes Physical Maladies

"Perfect love casteth out fear," said St. John in the long ago (1 John 4:18). And modern medicine and psychology have finally caught up with the Bible and confirmed that truth. John is talking about the two strongest emotions of the human system—love and fear—and he says love has the power to destroy fear.

Physicians today tell us that from 50 to 75 per cent of all of our sicknesses is caused by our emotions. Emotion is simply the ability to feel. Keep telling yourself that you feel sick and you will be sick. If you are sick more than half of the time your sickness will be cured simply by convincing yourself that you feel well.

We have physical bodies and we have feelings or emotions. Basically all of our emotions are good but if any of them get out of control then they are bad.

There are four main groups of destructive emotions. Actually even these emotions are good as long as we can control them but when we let them get out of hand they make us sick in many ways. There is the fear group including anxiety, worry and apprehension.

Anger is the father of another group of destructive emotions. Some of the children of anger are hostility, resentment, envy, jealousy and hatred. However, anger is closely related to fear.

A third group of destructive emotions are headed by what we feel is a sense of failure. This leads to such things as discouragement, depressed moods and guilt feelings. Without this family of emotions, there would be no repentance but they can also lead to self-destruction.

Pride is the captain of another army of sickening emotions including prejudice, self-consciousness and conceit.

When St. John says, "Perfect love casteth out fear," I think that by fear he has in mind all of the destructive emotions because they are all a part of or stem from fear. And when he talks about love he means all of the healing emotions because love is the basis of them all.

There is faith which makes us believe. And hope which keeps us looking upward and forward. "But the greatest of these is love," said St. Paul (1 Corinthians 13:13). And God's book tells us that if you have perfect love in your heart it will drive out your fears and worries, and make you a well-balanced and happy person.

In other words St. John says the only way to destroy our sickening emotions is to develop our healing emotions.

GOP, Democrats Are Both on Spot

WASHINGTON—A calm reading of President Eisenhower's State of the Union message could hardly have prepared one for the explosive outburst which instantly came from the Democratic leadership. There was no harsh partisanship in the message. As election-year State of the Union addresses go, this was one of the mildest. Why should the Democratic leaders react so critically?

There was no truculence in the message. It was quietly phrased and its proposals respectfully advanced. Mr. Eisenhower did not create any of the mood which some other presidents have created—a kind of "do this, or else" affront to Congress. Why should the Democrats respond so sharply?

What the message did principally was to set out—zealously and with a sense of urgency—a substantial number of legislative proposals bearing directly on the welfare of many millions of people—measures which at many points have had considerable Democratic support in the past.

The Democrats aren't mad at the President because he has attacked them but because he has very nearly surrounded them. The Democrats are not mad at the President because he has asked them to do what they don't want to do but because he has asked them to do the things they wanted to do without his asking!

One leading Democrat put it rather frankly in private conversation. "For several years," he remarked, "I have introduced bills in Congress to carry out nearly all these proposals. And now along comes the President to take all the credit."

The fact is that the President has laid down a challenge not only to the Democrats but to his own party as well.

Mr. Eisenhower's legislative program faithfully implements his often stated philosophy of government—a conservative-humanitarian philosophy designed to deal responsibly with the needs of the people.

In his TV broadcast from Key West Mr. Eisenhower stressed his determination to respond to the "human needs" of the nation. These needs are reflected in his proposals dealing with aid to education, improved minimum wage law, widened coverage for old-age pensions, medical research, health re-insurance, public housing, highways and child welfare.

The Republican members of Congress should not be surprised and the Democratic members of Congress should not be dismayed by the President's legislative budget. It is authentic Eisenhower.

Both parties will be on trial before the election-year voters as Mr. Eisenhower's legislative program goes onto the slow-moving congressional assembly line. The President doesn't say that his version of a bill is the only suitable version. What worries the Democrats is that they can oppose the President only at the gravest political risk and can support the President only at the risk of conceding him much of the credit.

Those Republicans who have been reluctant in the past to go along with the President's "humanitarian" legislation are equally on the spot. They know that they are driving nails into the coffin of their own party by opposition to the Eisenhower program—and the elections are frightfully near at hand.

Ike Remains Firm On Civil Liberties

WASHINGTON—In his annual message to Congress President Eisenhower said something about our international effort and the pursuit of peace which should be emphasized and followed up—as he suggested it was this:

"The sum of our international effort should be this: The waging of peace with as much resourcefulness and as great a sense of dedication and urgency as we have mustered in defense of our country in time of war. In this effort our weapon is not force. Our weapons are the principles and ideas embodied in our historic traditions applied with the same vigor that in the past made America a living promise of freedom for all mankind."

This was just after he told Congress that he is recommending a substantial increase in the budget for the United States Information Agency which has the job of telling the American story abroad.

One part of our story and of the historic traditions of which he spoke is what we do about achieving equality and protecting civil liberties and he came to this toward the end of his message thus:

"The stature of our leadership in the free world has increased because we have moved toward assuring our citizens equality in justice, in opportunity and in civil rights. We must strive to have every person judged and measured by what he is rather than by his color, race or religion."

But there are some blots on our record. Referring to one of them he said:

Billion-Dollar Soil Bank Tied to Surplus Disposal

peared likely for 1957, but this would not offset Democratic inroads in farm states this year.

The President estimated that the soil bank could achieve a 12 per cent reduction in crop land until surpluses are absorbed and prices strengthened. He said at least 40,000,000 acres of the country's crop land would be taken out of production.

He linked the soil bank with stepped-up disposal programs to channel more government-owned stocks into domestic and foreign sales and relief and welfare programs.

OTHER POINTS

In addition to the soil bank and surplus disposal, the President made these seven recommendations:

1. Place a limit in dollars on the size of federal price support loans to any one individual or farming unit. This should be high enough to give protection to efficiently operated family farms, but not so high as to eliminate the risk for large commercial farming operations.

2. Increase federal appropriations for agricultural research by 25 per cent to a total of $103 million in a drive to find new uses for crops, new crops and new markets.

3. Relieve farmers of the federal tax on gasoline used in farm production. This tax is estimated at $60 million a year.

4. Extend the special school milk program for two years and increase funds from $50 million to $75 million a year for this "constructive" use of dairy surpluses.

5. Carry forward a rural development program to help 1-500,000 low-income and part-time farmers to increase efficiency and find off-farm business and industrial jobs.

6. Assure that adequate federal credit facilities are available to farmers who are unable to obtain needed credit through ordinary commercial sources.

7. Strengthen commodity programs by continuing to ease or eliminate controls over farmers whenever possible and continue supports on many crops at the highest level possible without creating new surpluses.

COTTON QUOTAS

He also proposed that Congress should consider replacing cotton acreage allotments with quantity allotments, beginning in 1957. He noted that cotton growers had been able to offset acreage allotments by new technology, including heavy fertilization, to gain increased yields per acre.

Virginians Vote 2-1 for School Plan support of many clergymen, women's groups and labor spokesmen to his side.

Boothe, and many on his side, said they were for segregated schools but argued that letting down the constitutional bar against public money for private school tuition would be a grave threat to the future of public schools in the state.

Only one of the state's 10 Congressional districts—the northern Virginia 10th across from Washington—was recorded against the plan and the strength of the 10th opposition was about spent with most of its returns already in.

The issue was hardly in doubt from the moment the precincts began to report. Southside Virginia rolled up margins for the convention call by as much as six and seven to one.

The result of the vote—the first positive step by Virginia's electorate to dilute the impact of the Supreme Court decision outlawing racial segregation — means the General Assembly, meeting Wednesday, has a point of departure for a school program.

The assembly is expected to provide for the calling of a convention in the near future and set up the machinery for the election of its delegates.

Gov. Stanley will perhaps suggest a time schedule for legislative action when he addresses the opening session.

gressional committees will improve the program outlined by the President.

George favors fixed price supports at not less than 95 per cent of parity. He complained that "there has been no adequate emphasis placed on distribution of surpluses and on foreign markets."

Rep. Prince Preston of Statesboro said: "The change the President recommends in cotton allotments will be sure to create great friction among farmers and give rise to favoritism in its administration. The soil bank idea holds some hope of getting rid of our surplus in commodities, but the rest of the message was filled with platitudes that are meaningless. The peanut provision is unsatisfactory."

Rep. Iris Blitch of Homerville said she was disappointed that the message failed to make any mention of the tobacco production.

Rep. E. L. (Tic) Forrester of Leesburg said, "All of us want to get rid of the big surplus in farm commodities. The soil bank idea may contribute to this end. But the President is still adhering to a flexible price-support program. There should be 90 per cent parity price supports."

Rep. J. L. Pilcher of Meigs said he would like to give the farm message more study before commenting fully.

"The President's message was not a bill but more a series of generalities," he said. "It will require study. . . . It does look, however, like a further cut in peanut production is being proposed. I don't think this is the answer. Neither am I convinced that the cotton provisions of the program will work out."

Maybe It's a Streak
Of the Miser in Us All

My MARJORY SMITH

LONG LINES at bank savings windows Monday reminded a savings company official of a "January and July phenomenon," he's noted over the years.

"It's amazing," he said, "how many people—when it comes time to post the interest their savings have earned—decide to draw out their account. They seem to want to see and handle the money. Usually they put it right back in the savings account next day—sometimes during the same hour they draw it out. Guess there's a little streak of the miser in all of us!"

Some 60 doctors in the metropolitan Atlanta area have replied to questionnaires presented by the Suburban Atlanta Hospital Advisory Council, according to Chairman Roland Neeson.

The questionnaire answers indicate a growing need for more conveniently located hospital facilities for both doctors and patients, Neeson said.

A meeting of the council with interested citizens and officials of the State Health Department has been scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Jan. 18 in Alpharetta.

The doctors' survey will be studied by the health department as soon as qualified personnel are hired, W. E. Uzzell, chief of the survey and planning section of the department, said. The study was scheduled for last Dec. 6, but lack of personnel caused the delay.

Jesup Sees Early End to Hospital Woes

By HAROLD RHODEN

Constitution Staff Writer
JESUP, Jan. 9—Hospital facilities in this bustling southeast Georgia city, which have been on a "see-saw" basis for more than a month, should be settled in the near future.

A hospital administrator is expected to be selected, perhaps by the end of the week, a spokesman for the Jesup-Wayne County Emergency Hospital Authority said today.

The 72-bed hospital, which serves Wayne, Long, Glynn and Pierce Counties, and handles about two traffic victims a day from crowded U.S. Highway 301 which splits the city, was closed from Dec. 1 to Jan. 1 except for emergency cases.

Owner Dr. J. A. Leaphart said he was closing the hospital because of financial loss, his personal health and because he did not think it fair one man should furnish all the hospital beds for a community.

The non-profit emergency authority has been seeking to lease the hospital from Dr. Leaphart for between $1,500 to $2,000 a month, until adequate hospital facilities are provided.

Dr. Leaphart told authority officials the hospital would be rent-free in the interim between its Dec. 1 closing and referendum date for a Hill-Burton hospital, if the referendum fails.

A similar referendum was defeated in 1953 by 76 votes. Wayne County commissioners decided to leave hands off the hospital when County Atty. Joe Thomas said there was no legal way in which the county could operate the hospital in period between Dec. 1 and referendum date. A resolution calling for the referendum as soon as possible, probably early spring, was passed by the commissioners at their last meeting.

The emergency authority, organized Dec. 3 by several hundred citizens from all over the county, named E. T. Youngblood chairman of the board of directors; Earl Colvin, George Weinstein, John Henry Harris, Tom Stein, George Parrish Sr. and Lindsay Grace to the board.

Between 80 and 90 people subscribed more than $40,000 to operate the hospital, including a $5,500 contribution from Screven, a town of 400 population in the county.

The directors were ordered to negotiate a lease for the hospital; select a trained administrator and negotiate for the care of indigent patients. Only the second requirement has to be met before the hospital is turned over to the authority.

A lease has been drawn up, calling for the payment of maintenance and operation of the hospital; payment of taxes; interest on hospital notes; insurance and equipment. A spokesman said these payments will run between $1,500 and $2,000 a month.

Announce New Way To Shrink Painful Piles

Science Finds Healing Substance That Does Both—
Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain—without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne*)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H.* Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

EASTERN BUYS JET AIRLINERS

Douglas DC-8s with Pratt & Whitney Engines to provide new travel speed, comfort and luxury

Eastern Air Lines, a pioneer in bringing the benefits of fast, convenient air travel to millions, moves dramatically into the new age of jet air travel with the purchase of a large fleet of Douglas DC-8 jet airliners. The sleek new transports will begin to go into service in 1959.

The first six Douglas DC-8s to be delivered will be powered by four Pratt & Whitney Aircraft JT3 twin spool, axial-flow jet engines. These will be the same basic engines that power the Navy's big Douglas A3D jet bomber, the supersonic Douglas F4D Navy fighter, and other leading military aircraft. An additional twelve DC-8s (with eight more under option) will be powered by a new advanced Pratt & Whitney JT4 jet engine, also of twin spool, axial-flow design.

With its jet powered airliners, Eastern Air Lines will introduce its passengers to a new kind of air transportation, far faster, with new comfort and luxury. Typical flying times will be New York to Miami, two hours fifteen minutes and New York to Mexico City, four hours.

Eastern Air Lines pioneered air service between New York and Florida twenty-seven years ago. Its routes have grown until now they cover practically the entire country east of the Mississippi River, with flights west as far as Texas and south into Mexico, the Caribbean and South America. In 1955 Eastern carried 7,199,198 passengers; over the years a total of 41,712,000.

Eastern's new airliners will be the product of a long association between Douglas and Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, an association that over the years has given America outstanding commercial transports as well as leading military aircraft.

In the age of jet air travel now beginning Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's dependable jet engines will play a major role. They will help demonstrate again that the U. S. aircraft industry leads the world in commercial transportation.

Board Postpones Action On Coweta School Chief

The State Board of Education deferred action Monday on the case of Coweta County School Supt. J. Wilkins Smith, charged with improperly obtaining a higher teaching certificate than he merited.

Smith, a candidate for reelection Jan. 18, said in an appeal to the board that he was a "victim of politics."

L. M. Lester, head of the teacher certification division of the State Education Department, said Smith had only about three years of college training but improperly obtained a certificate for five years of training and a master's degree.

The Coweta superintendent maintains he did not apply for the higher certificate, but that it was sent to him inadvertently. His file is missing from the state education office records, the board was told. Smith has made restitution of $5,023, representing the difference in salary. The issue before the board is whether to revoke his three-year permanent certificate. Members of Smith's local board, including Mrs. Stewart Colley of Grantville and W. J. Estes of Harrison, appeared to state the local board "could not condone Smith's action." Estes declared the Coweta superintendent "should resign" and Mrs. Colley added, "It's a moral issue—he has not been honest with the board."

LOVETT ASKS DELAY

Member Herschel Lovett proposed that action be deferred until after State Board Vice Chairman James S. Peters of Manchester—whose district include Coweta County—can be present.

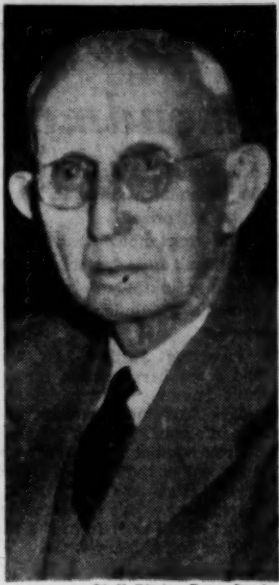

A veteran Georgia educator asked board members to support the federal school building bill—if it comes to Congress without a segregation rider. Kankakee (Buck) Anderson, Polk County superintendent, asked board members to write Georgia's congressional delegation to urge passage of the proposed legislation.

The board postponed action in the absence of Peters and two other members. Lovett commented, "Don't let's jeopardize the segregation issue by being too hasty!"

DESEGREGATION WEDGE

Legal advisors to the governor have expressed fear in the past that acceptance of federal funds for new school construction would give government authorities a wedge to force desegregation.

Lovett asked fellow board members to "think over" a proposal that Georgia school children who "had an 80 or B average at the end of their seventh year" be promoted to the ninth grade. He said the suggestion came from "a superintendent who did not want his name used," adding, "In some cases we are not getting the dollar value of 12 grades; we are losing a year there."

SENATE DEAN—Dr. C. L. Ayers of Toccoa, oldest member of the Georgia Senate, celebrated his 79th birthday Monday as the 1956 Senate convened. He was congratulated in a resolution adopted by his colleagues.

Screen Felons, Sex Violators Before Releasing, Bill Urges

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Sex offenders and three-time felons could be required to show an ability to return to normal society before their release under a bill approved Monday by a special committee.

Rep. Robert L. Scoggins, chairman of the committee, said the bill would be introduced in the House Tuesday.

The bill provides for creation of a board of medical and psychiatric professionals to act in an advisory capacity to the State Pardon and Parole Board. The experts, on request of the Board, would examine prisoners shortly before their sentences expire.

If the experts find a prisoner unprepared for normal society, the bill would empower the involved solicitor general to start writ of lunacy proceedings against the man. The prisoner then would come under state laws governing the insane.

Besides setting up the board of experts, the bill would create a staff of technicians to work for the experts and the Pardon and Parole Board in keeping complete records of persons affected, including their home and work life, behavior in prison and other personality data.

The introducing committee is composed of Seventh District legislators. Proposals similar to those in the bill were embodied in recent presentations to the Fulton County Grand Jury. Similar suggestions also have been made to the Committee on Criminal Procedure of the Georgia Bar Assn.

Billy Graham Communion Service Is A Memorial

QUESTION: Dear Dr. Graham, I have been ill for many years. Although my pastor has faithfully visited me and brought spiritual comfort, he has never served me communion. Some of my friends think that I should ask another minister to visit me who will do so. Do so. Do you think it would help me to make this change?—R. C.

ANSWER: In the Bible, Jesus served the bread and wine to His disciples, and doing so He said, "This do in remembrance of me." After that first communion service, it was usually a church worship service to be observed in the form of fellowship of those who had believed in Him.

There is no verse in the Bible that would lead us to believe that we can receive physical help from this observance, not even that we will be forgiven because we do so. It is a memorial service. Inasmuch as your pastor has visited and prayed with you and brought you spiritual comfort, I am inclined to think that you should thank God for his faithfulness and the comfort he brings to you.

You will be just as good a Christian though you have not observed this ordinance, and another minister might not have the same concern for your spiritual welfare. God knows why you are confined, and why you are denied this privilege. Accept it as from Him, and thank Him for a minister who through the years has been faithful in visiting you to bring you comfort from the Scriptures.

Mental Health Study Gets $25,000 Boost

NEW YORK, Jan. 9 (AP)—The Joint Commission on Mental Illness has received a $250,000 government grant for the first phase of a three-year study of ways to improve mental health.

The commission said Congress has authorized an additional $500,000 in grants through the Public Health Service, conditioned to some extent on added financial support from other sources.

The commission was organized by 20 leading medical and other organizations interested in the mental health field.

"Next time you have a headache, a pain or a cold, do what I do. Take two Bufferin tablets and get relief fast... and I mean twice as fast as aspirin!"

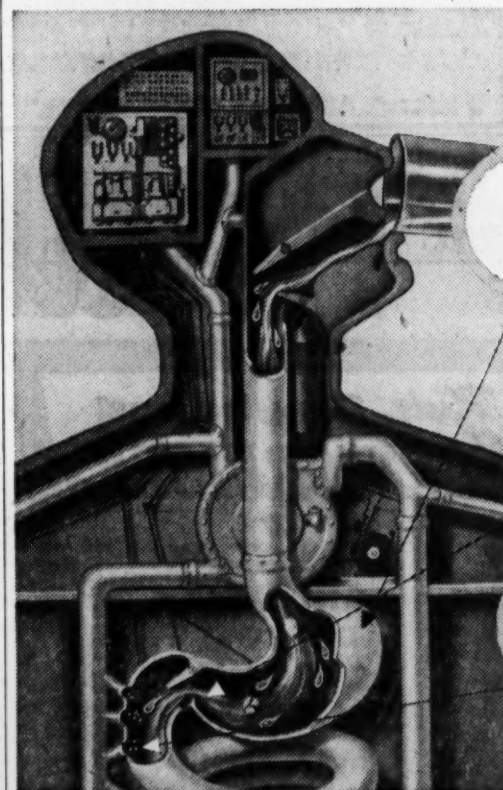

Says Arthur Godfrey

BUFFERIN®

acts twice as fast as aspirin!

DOESN'T UPSET YOUR STOMACH

1 Medical science knows that a pain reliever must go through the stomach and into the blood stream to relieve pain.

2 Bufferin combines aspirin with two antacid ingredients. These speed the pain reliever out of the stomach and into the blood stream twice as fast as aspirin. So...

3 Bufferin acts twice as fast as aspirin to relieve pain. And it won't upset your stomach as aspirin often does.

Ask your own doctor about Bufferin's remarkable ability to relieve pain and its freedom from harmful ingredients.

8 years of continuous medical research in hospitals and clinics have established Bufferin's effectiveness and speed of action. Bufferin has met the same rigid tests a doctor demands of medicines used in his own practice.

These tests prove the antacid ingredients in Bufferin speed the pain-relieving ingredient into the blood stream twice as fast as aspirin. They also protect you from the upset stomach aspirin often causes.

So, for effective, fast relief from headaches, discomfort of colds, neuralgia and ordinary muscular aches and pains use the modern pain reliever... BUFFERIN.

If you suffer from pain of arthritis or rheumatism, ask your physician about Bufferin

"The committee feels that the tax dollar should be spent as wisely as possible at all times and that purchases should be made at the lowest and best price to the state, regardless of the agency or person or corporation or concern from whom the purchase is made," the report said.

Senate members of the joint committee filed minority reports, contending that House members didn't go far enough, particularly on the purchasing department.

State Constitution Being Harmed By Fulton Amendment, Court Says

The Georgia Supreme Court Monday scored a Fulton County constitutional amendment as "undermining the state Constitution."

However, it upheld constitutionality of the Fulton amendment and a law creating the joint city-county board of tax assessors. But, it added that had the attack been made under the federal Constitution instead of the state Constitution, the outcome might have been different.

ANOTHER DECISION

An another important decision Monday, the court voided a contract between the Georgia Highway Department and the Ocean Highway and Port Authority of Florida for construction of a 50-mile toll road into coastal Georgia.

The Fulton County appeal was made by Mrs. Elinor Roberts, who sought to enjoin Fulton Tax Commissioner T. Earl Suttles from increasing her taxes on the basis of the city-county board's assessment. Her property is outside the Atlanta city limits.

Mrs. Roberts claimed her constitutional protection of equal protection of law was violated in that the local amendment and law didn't require the assessors to be freeholders or residents of the county.

RATIFIED IN 1954

The constitutional amendment authorizing the board was ratified by the people in November, 1954, after the Legislature previously had passed a law setting up the board. The high court said it could only compare the law with public authorities is restricted to those authorities created by the Georgia Legislature, the court said.

The court noted that the constitutional amendment was written so as to apply only to "counties of a population of 300,000 or more."

Presiding Justice Lee Wyatt had some harsh words for such amendments.

The Supreme Court reversed the Colquitt County Superior Court's verdict in a declaratory judgment of the State of Georgia against Highway Chairman W. A. Blasingame. This involved the proposed toll road from the Florida line to St. Mary's, Ga.

NO CONTRACTS

Chief Justice W. H. Duckworth wrote the court's unanimous decision which held that the state cannot make contracts with public authorities created by other states or other counties. Georgia's power to make contracts with

Senate Ready To Take Up Segregation Safeguards

Supreme Court's ruling against segregation in the public schools.

The "nullification" or "interposition" principle is being pushed in Virginia. But administration leaders said Monday that Georgia needs time to see what other Southern states are going to do about presenting a united front.

Meanwhile, still another segregation bill, held over from the 1955 session, is pending in the House. It would prohibit mixed athletic events or dances.

The Senate in its opening session approved a sweeping revision of its rules and committees. Adopted was a "streamlining" resolution drastically reducing the number of standing committees from 38 to 16 and trimming the size of committees.

Recommended by an interim study committee, the changes will take effect immediately. Lt. Gov. Vandiver said he expects to complete new committee assignments within about two days.

BAR NEWSMEN?

Objection was voiced by Sen. Walter Harrison of Millen to one provision of the reorganization resolution which could ultimately bar the press from the Senate floor. However, that provision contained a clause which suspends any ban on press privileges of the floor until a press gallery can be built.

"I fail to concur with a lot of people who think that members of the press are obnoxious," Harrison said. "I say thank God for the working press and a free press. We need them and they are the finest safeguard we have in a democracy."

"I don't know where you are going to put the gilded cage, but I object to putting the press in a cage—up in the gallery where they can't see or hear," Harrison added.

PRESS APART

Sen. Everett Millican of Atlanta said, however, that most of the 48 state legislatures have press galleries. But he said that provision of the resolution may never be put into effect and certainly not in this session.

Over in the House a privileged resolution was adopted calling on Congress to recall agricultural technicians and trainees furnished foreign nations under the Point Four program. It said the services of these technicians and trainees should be used in the interest of American agriculture. Its sponsors included Speaker Moots.

The House also asked Congress to provide that the cotton acreage allotment be set as of 1955 by the states.

SENATE BILLS

Two Senate bills were being readied by Sen. Charlie Dews of Edison. One is aimed at tightening Georgia's automobile liability laws and the other at resolving school consolidation disputes.

Dews was on crutches as result of a severe leg injury suffered four months ago when his car was hit by a motorist who ran a red light.

Dews said that motorist had no liability insurance and no financial assets. The Edison senator said his bill would make it mandatory for an automobile owner to have some form of liability coverage before being issued a license tag.

Hannah Plea Calls Trial Unfair

By JACK NELSON

Irregularities in jury supervision and prevalence of "intense" feeling prevented Mrs. Hannah's trial that it caused a "miscarriage of justice."

Dean alleged that grounds for a new trial include:

1. The case was prosecuted by "an attorney unauthorized by law." (Marshall Pollock, solicitor general for the Western circuit, assisted by C. J. Peeler of Decatur, prosecuted the case for Dean.)

2. The jury was "illegally" left overnight in custody of a man who was not a bailiff.

3. The jury spent the night in another county when it could have obtained lodging in Rockdale County.

4. Errors in the charge to the jury were prejudicial to the defendant.

No child under 12 years of age can serve as a page in the Georgia Senate under a new rule adopted Monday.

The new rule also says that a senator shall not name more than one page per day for five days during the session.

Feel "guilty" about your appetite?

Sugar can help you control it

Your appetite is directly related to your body's need for energy

Sugar supplies energy—satisfies appetite faster than any other food

By helping to overcome hunger that leads to over-eating, sugar can save you more calories than artificial sweeteners do

Nature's own pure-food sweetener. The sugar you sprinkle on your grapefruit is exactly the same as the sugar nature put in the fruit itself.

"Scientific Nibbles"—a new way to more effective weight control

It's not what you eat but how much you eat that determines the size of your waistline.

That's why nutritionists now believe that weight control is more likely to be permanent and satisfying when your diet includes the same foods that you and your family normally eat.

The only thing that you cut down on is the size of the portions. The only things that you do without are second helpings.

Dieting is a lot easier when your diet includes sugar. You know from experience that even when you're "hungry as a bear"—and eat, for example, a piece of candy just before bedtime—it's easier to stay satisfied on less food.

New research at a leading university has found a reason—one that makes the "Scientific Nibble" a key part of newer weight-control diets.

Low blood sugar level—big appetite

The body's most basic need is for energy. Energy to work, to play, to act... to keep the heart beating. This energy comes from sugar in the blood stream, which in turn, comes from food.

The food that supplies energy the fastest—in its most quickly and readily used form—is sugar itself.

This requirement for energy is so important, and so constant, that nature warns your brain and your body against a shortage: you not only get tired, you get hungry.

Quick way to curb hunger

The practical application of this new knowledge to the problem of weight control has been to give people a simple, natural way to curb their appetites. A little snack before a meal raises your blood sugar level, helps to keep you from getting "too hungry to hold back" at mealtimes.

A leading authority on nutrition calls these hunger-pacifying snacks "Scientific Nibbles."

Your "Scientific Nibble" should be something that you would ordinarily eat at a regular meal—such as the grapefruit shown in the picture above. Or, it could be a refreshing soft drink containing sugar, a cookie, or simply a spoonful of sugar in your coffee or tea. This same authority suggests a piece of pie in the late afternoon instead of dessert at the evening meal. Since artificial sweeteners, in pills or any other form, supply no energy, and have no effect on the blood sugar level, they cannot help you to overcome hunger.

Revive energy—spend your calories

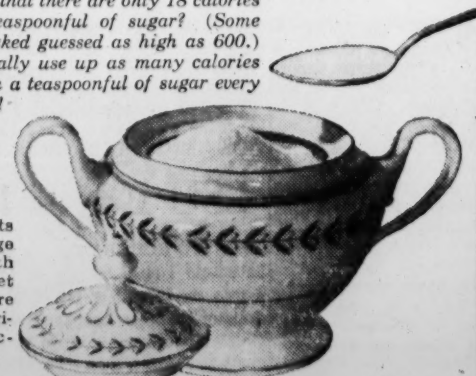

By making it a part of your regular mid-morning and mid-afternoon energy break, your "Scientific Nibble" also relieves fatigue that slows you down to "low gear." By helping to keep you operating at peak efficiency, sugar helps you use up calories instead of storing them up.

18 CALORIES

Surprise you that there are only 18 calories in a level teaspoonful of sugar? (Some people we asked guessed as high as 600.) You'll normally use up as many calories as you get in a teaspoonful of sugar every 7½ minutes!

All statements in this message apply to both cane and beet sugar and are based on nutritionally accepted facts.

Mangrum 272 Wins Los Angeles Meet

Fourth L.A. Tourney Victory Eclipses Barber Score by Three

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9 (AP)—Lloyd Mangrum captured the $30,000 Los Angeles Open today, scoring a par 71 for a record 72-hole score of 272 to become the second golfer in the 30 editions of the event to win the tournament four times.

The colorful Mangrum was more the scrapper than the gambler on this fine final day of the tournament, but his performance was good enough to turn back the threat first of Tommy Bolt and then little Jerry Barber.

Only the late Mac Donald Smith, back in 1928-29-32-34, was able to win this event four times, and prior to today, only Mangrum and Ben Hogan had achieved the feat three times.

The 41-year-old Mangrum, who came off the shelf after a rib injury and a layoff from golf since last spring, hit the $6,000 first prize jackpot three strokes ahead of his nearest rival at the finish, Barber, with Bolt third.

Mangrum broke the tournament record for the 72-hole distance, the 273 registered in 1938 by Jimmy Thompson at Griffith Park municipal park.

Barber pulled ahead of Bolt on the final nine holes in the struggle for $3,200 second place money, with Bolt settling for $2,200.

Barber fired a last round 70 and Bolt a par 71 as a huge gallery witnessed the windup at the Rancho municipal course with its par 36-35-71 over a layout that measured 7,048 yards.

Cary Middlecoff, with a 70, finished fourth at 277; and tied for fifth were E. J. (Dutch) Harrison and John Barnum, both with 73 from 281.

Mangrum started the round five shots in front of Bolt and Barber, and passing the 63rd hole he was still five in front of Bolt and six in front of Barber.

Mangrum, the 1946 National Open champion, won this event first in 1949. He duplicated the wins in 1951 and 1953.

All but forgotten in the excitement of the moment was the center of the hubbub a year ago, Gene Littler. Littler scored 71-69-73-72-285.

Mangrum sunk that out of sight with his amazing scores—66-66-68-72-272.

WHATEVER HIS MOTIVES, THE BLOW COUNTED

NORRIS DELAYED, THEN THREW KAYO PUNCH AT BOXING GUILD

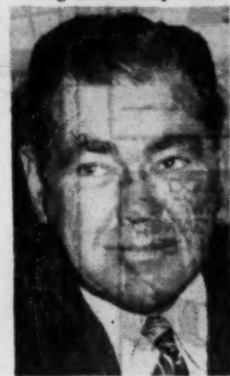

By ARTHUR DALEY

(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9—It had been felt from the beginning that one man had the power to institute a clean-up of boxing and to implement any reforms. He was not Julius Helfand, the chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission.

Nor was he any other crusader. He was James Douglas Norris, the president of the International Boxing Club.

Jim Norris owned the only big store in the cauliflower industry and had the only show windows. Anyone with fists and merchandise to sell had to go to him or be reduced to the equivalent of peddling his wares unprofitably on street corners.

JIM NORRIS

Yet it always will be a mystery why a multi-millionaire of Norris' exalted financial stature, breeding and background hadn't taken action sooner. But when he threw his weight behind Helfand the other day and pledged full support, the commissioner had won the first and most important round of his fight to launder the fist-cuffing trade. Reform is poised now for the knockout punch.

Helfand had begun his dry-cleaning by investigating the Boxing Guild of New York and no prosecutor ever stumbled over a less cooperative group of witnesses. Nobody knew nuthin' from nuthin'. He connected the guild's men with "the sinister figure of the notorious Frankie Carbo... one of the most illusive personalities in the field of boxing." Then he ordered the guild to disband.

With the same short-sighted stupidity that they used during the investigation itself, the managers elected to defy the commissioner. They were willing to kill boxing in New York and take their business elsewhere. The first stop was to be Baltimore.

Helfand, on the verge of defeat, took one last swing. He charged that the Baltimore promoter had a criminal record and that the undercover boss was Carbo. He further charged that if the St. Nick promoters, Tex Sullivan and Willie (The Beard) Gilzenberg, shifted their base of operations to Baltimore, they would be held liable for wilful association with underworld characters.

Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland quickly intervened. "If they are disqualified in New York, they should be disqualified in Maryland," he said. Then he assembled his commission and this group withdrew its sanction.

The crusher came when Norris unexpectedly announced that he would go along with Helfand and continue to hold bouts in New York. Instantly the guild started to disintegrate as Al Weill, the manager of Rocky Marciano, telegraphed his resignation.

It would be nice to report that Norris, finally seeing the light, has aided the boxing clean-up only from the most idealistic of motives. But it is much more likely that he merely was being practical. A practical man is James Douglas Norris.

One day not long ago he was leaving Madison Square Garden for lunch with Harry Markson, his managing director. They stopped on the corner to buy newspapers. A penny rolled out into the street. Big Jim darted in front of an oncoming taxi and retrieved the penny.

"Great grief, Jim," said the aghast Harry. "You have millions of dollars and you still chase a penny."

"How do you think my Old Man got all this money in the first place?" laughed Norris as he pocketed the coin.

Norris is a free enough spender but he still has a huge investment in Madison Square Garden, where he is president and a main stockholder. He also owns the Detroit Olympia, the Chicago Stadium and other big arenas around the country. Without his New York outlet he'd encounter difficulties.

Therefore it was sound business for him to wave his towel in Helfand's corner. Maybe he even saw a chance to cut loose from the undercover puppet-manipulators with the criminal records.

Whatever his motives, Norris did a fine thing for boxing by giving his support to Helfand. The commissioner has not won his bout yet, but he has unexpectedly tied up his foe in the clinches and has scored heavily in the infighting. Who knows? Maybe he even can achieve the knockout he deserves.

Smith's Echols Paces Scorers With Moore, Callier on Heels

Thompson Hits '20 Mark,' Too

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

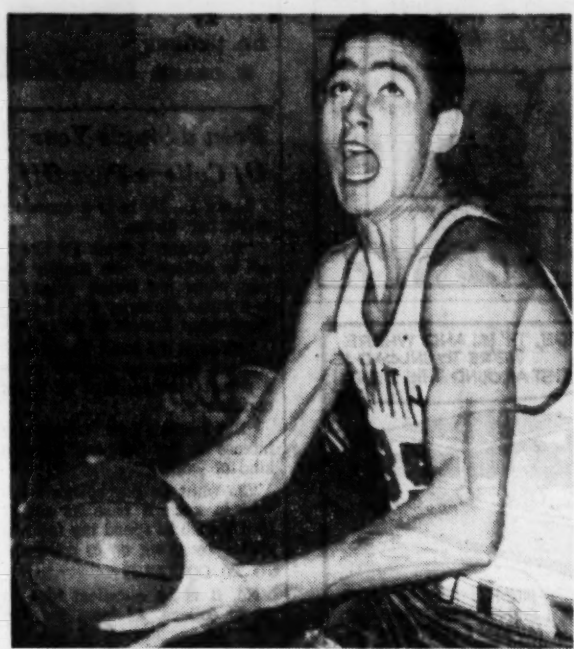

Lamar Echols, Smith High's 6-5 center who finished second in the 1955 City League high school basketball scoring race, signified intention of going for the top spot this season as he fired 24 points in his first loop game to take the early 3-AA leadership.

Echols, a junior who averaged 20.1 points per game last time and finished behind the sensational, record-breaking 25.9 median of Murphy's Paul Cochran, hit his big 24 in a 53-36 loss to Sylvan.

Myron Moore, who a year ago averaged only 9.6, bucketed 41 points in Murphy's first two-loop victories over Northside, 70-64, and West Fulton, 51-46, and is in second place with a 20.5 average.

Northside's Bud Callier, 10th last season with a 15.3 average, sacked 40 in his first two 1956 outings and is tied for third with Joe Thompson, who socked home 20 as his Bass team lost to North Fulton, 74-46. Callier had 22 counters the night his Tigers fell to O'Keefe, 61-60.

Dennis Freeman, O'Keefe's new-found net sizzler, has 38 points in two trips to court and is slated to meet with Brown's Charles Willis, whose 19 points sparked Brown

Even a Single Year Of College Pays Off

Laura L., 18, is in a quandary about her future.

"Dr. Crane, I think I'd like to go to college," she timidly began, "but my father argues it is a waste of money since I don't know what I want to do in life. He says if I knew I would become a nurse or planned to be a school teacher, then he might consider it."

"But I admit I don't have any intense desire for any specific kind of work."

"So what do psychologists advise in such a case as mine? Is it foolish to spend my father's money by going on to college?"

GO TO COLLEGE

No, it is an excellent idea to go to college, at least for one full year, regardless of whether or not you know what you wish to do as a permanent career.

Indeed, I once made a survey of my senior students in liberal arts at Northwestern University, just before their graduation from four years at college, and half of them still didn't know what they were going to do in life.

So never let uncertainty regarding your specific goal, stop you from starting on the road to success and happiness.

"An investment in knowledge," said wise old Benjamin Franklin, "always pays the best dividends."

Statistics show that college students earn far more than non-college students even when they don't know at the start exactly what career they wish to enter.

And that is true not just of professional students, such as engineers, physicians, lawyers, teachers, clergymen, nurses, etc.

LIKEWISE TRUE

It is likewise true of students who simply take a broad cultural course without specializing for a definite profession in life.

Going to college offers many benefits that aren't traced directly to the lectures of your professors.

For example, you break away from home and learn to stand on your own feet socially. That matures you a great deal and thus renders you more capable of later success.

You also meet people from all over the country and even many foreign students, so your mental horizons are wider than before, and you have friends everywhere.

You become socially more assured and can speak with greater poise, for you have gained confidence. This greater confidence is one of the intangibles that really pays off in every kind of job you may later select.

BEFORE CRISIS

An extra year of schooling at the college level, also teaches you to bear down before a crisis. It isn't the specific facts which you learn, that pay off so richly in later life.

But you acquire the art of cramming effectively before a final exam and of analyzing facts swiftly and meeting deadlines. That's the big pay-off from college.

So any boy or girl who has made good grades in high school, will be able to get $10,000 in increased earnings later in life for every $1,000 he invests in college, even if he attends but one year.

Feeding Troubles

Not So Serious

Feeding problems are common in childhood but are not as serious as most parents believe. I doubt if anyone has ever heard of a youngster who starved to death because of refusal to eat, or who died prematurely because he turned down spinach, turnips, or poached eggs.

These dilemmas usually are solved by using common sense rather than argument or force. Physicians specializing in child care—through experience—have learned many tricks in handling such cases.

The answer to one of the most frequent questions of this nature came to my attention recently. It appeared in the Queries and Minor Notes section of the Journal of the American Medical Assn. A Pennsylvania physician inquired about a 4½-year-old girl who would not eat unless fed. The parents were concerned about malnutrition and were disinclined to follow the advice given that the child feed herself.

The unnamed authority who answered the question agreed with the family physician that there was no danger of malnutrition and that Mom and Dad should let the child alone so that she would feed herself.

He also believed that the parents might be playing a role and suggested: "Change the place of eating, change the dishes, and change the person who serves her."

The tyke should be told that things would be different from now on. Initially she was to be offered her favorite foods and those easiest to eat, including raw fruits and vegetables.

Meanwhile she must learn to cut soft foods like well cooked meats, potatoes, and carrots, with a dull edged knife.

A noticeable change would take place if the youngster ate at kindergarten or nursery school with other children.

Many of these boys and girls grow up emotionally when separated from mother's apron strings because association with youngsters their own age permits them to join in the give and take of such companionship.

ATE TOO MUCH?

Most of us do now and then... but famous antacid Sal Hepatica gives speedy relief from overeating upset.

Just take ½ teaspoon of sparkling Sal Hepatica in a glass of water and feel how fast it relieves nagging over-acidity.

The mild laxation which may also accompany its alkaline action helps relieve the constipation that often occurs when you overeat.

So be wise—get the economy-size bottle of Sal Hepatica today! Have it on hand if you should eat too much.

Take sparkling SAL HEPATICA and smile!

A Rhyme a Day

"Ambition is an admirable trait, but many business and professional men are shortening their lives by driving themselves beyond their mental and physical capacities." — Health column quote.

When one has done the best he could... it might be better if he would... just let it go at that and say... "tomorrow is another day"... but conscience comes to stand beside... his bed and says, "if you had tried... a little more you could have been... one of the country's leading men."

Sometimes it seems that too much stress... is placed on making a success... To be placed on the honor-roll... or top-man on the totem pole... is something we should not expect... and yet we do it and neglect... those little things that we can do... forgetting they're important, too.

"They serve who only stand and wait"... as Milton said, but here of late... you won't find many people who... are satisfied with what they do... or what they have, and that, perhaps... brings on a breakdown or collapse... hospital bills, a doctor's fee... and that about convinces me... it's better never to have tried... if trying leads to suicide.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Three hearts.

At the 29th annual Winter National championships recently held at Miami Beach, the contest for the men's teams of four provided the keenest type of competition. The eventual winners were Al Roth and Richard Freeman, Washington; Ralph Hirschberg and Edgar Kaplan, New York City, and Norman Kay, Merchantville, N.J.

Among members of the runner-up team were Charles Solomon and Sam Stayman who were employing this event in the nature of a warm-up for the World's Championship contest in which we are currently engaging in Paris, France.

Solomon, paired at the time with Stayman, gained a point for his team by a well-considered defensive play at trick two, when time was distinctly "of the essence." In third position he opened with one club and South overcalled with one no trump. The major suit holding makes this call appear somewhat irregular, but there is merit to the bid. South can produce eight tricks himself and if partner can deliver a smattering of stuff in spades and hearts there may even be a chance for game. Stayman offered a distributional raise to two clubs and North evinced implicit faith and not a little hope by his powder puff raise to two no trump.

Stayman chose to open the three of hearts and Solomon won with the ace. It was apparent that there was no future in this line of attack and from West's failure to open clubs it was probable that South held a double stopper in that suit. He therefore looked to the spade suit as the best source of tricks.

South's no trump began to look as though it were based on a long minor suit which would leave declarer short in both majors. If South had only two spades headed by just the jack there was a weakness in declarer's armor. So considering Solomon returned the two of spades, South played the seven. West the eight and dummy the 10. On a club lead East rose with the ace and returned a heart to his partner's king. The queen of spades came back and on the cover by dummy's king, declarer's jack was smothered. The defenders ran the spades and the contract went down to a two trick set.

Valentino Saves Otello as Young Singers Falter

VERDI—Otello Highlights. Albert DaCosta, Mariquita Moll, Frank Valentino, Hamburg Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Hans Jergens-Walther. Allegro Royale.

DaCosta and Miss Moll, two of the Metropolitan's newer stars, sing Otello and Desdemona with the virile enthusiasm of youth, but neither conveys the deep tragedy of this hopeless love. Valentino, a star for 17 years, is thoroughly at home as Iago and his profound and dramatic performance of the two Act II arias alone makes this Otello worthwhile. Sound is good for this label. GRG.

Fulton Convict Roll Drops; Bus Speeds Transfer

The Fulton County jail has the lowest number of prisoners in jail under court sentence that it has had in recent years. Fulton Sheriff T. Ralph Grimes said Monday.

There are 341 prisoners in the jail and only 31 under sentence, the sheriff pointed out.

"That's the lowest number we've had under court sentence in the last two or three years," the sheriff said.

Sheriff Grimes credited the low jail population to the purchase and use by the county of a $4,000 prisoner transfer bus to ferry prisoners under sentence from the jail to Georgia State Prison at Reidsville.

Tax Need Talks Planned By Fulton School Officials

By RICHARD ASHWORTH

Officials of the Fulton County school system have scheduled eight speaking engagements before civic groups and parent-teacher organizations to explain the system's upcoming referendum.

Supt. Paul D. West said speakers will explain the need for the increase in the county school tax limit from 15 to 25 mills as is proposed in the Jan. 20 vote.

Three engagements are scheduled Tuesday night. They are Central Park School, East Point, 8 p.m.; Asst. Supt. Douglas G. MacRae; Parklane School, East Point, 7:30 p.m.; J. D. Wootan Jr., administrative assistant, and Conley Hills School, 8 p.m., West.

THURSDAY TALKS

No talks are scheduled Wednesday. Three are scheduled Thursday. They are Russell High, PTA executive committee, 8 p.m.; West; East Point Lions, 7 p.m.; E. E. Baker, assistant director for transportation and attendance, and College Street School, Hapeville, 7:30 p.m., MacRae.

Two engagements have been set for Monday, Jan. 16. They are Church Street School, East Point, 7:30 p.m., West, and Campbell High PTA, Fairburn, 7:30 p.m., MacRae.

Meanwhile, a school official said Monday the system will run $700,000 short of its needs for operations during the 1956-57 school year if the Jan. 20 referendum on the tax ceiling fails.

CAUSES OF SHORTAGES

J. D. Wootan Jr., administrative assistant, said the shortage would be caused by expiration of an emergency appropriations measure, increased enrollment and a loss of revenue due to low property assessment under the tax reappraisal program.

Reenactment of the emergency appropriation—which provides up to $300,000 yearly to the schools from the county government—has been tied to the referendum outcome by the county legislative delegation.

The legislators said that if county voters approve the ceiling increase, they will introduce legislation the next day to provide any additional emergency funds that might be needed.

The measure expired Dec. 31, taking $300,000 from the system's budget. An additional $320,000 will be needed to provide for an expected enrollment increase of 1,600 pupils this fall. Also, some $200,000 in essentials are now missing from the budget, Wootan explained.

The state, however, is expected to increase its appropriation to the school system by about $100,000, cutting the shortage from over $800,000 to about $700,000, he added.

Auto Cases Set Fulton Court Pace

By RICHARD ASHWORTH

Cases for drunk driving led all others in Fulton Criminal Court last year and also showed a slight increase, Criminal Sol. John I. Kelley said Monday.

Some 1,851 cases for operating under the influence of intoxicants were tried last year, compared to 1,772 the previous year, Kelley said. This was out of a total case load of 8,798 cases.

There were 8,231 cases in Fulton Criminal Court in 1954.

ALSO DRIVING OFFENSE

Next highest number of cases also was a driving offense, the solicitor said. This was driving without a license in which 1,034 persons were involved, an increase of 112 over 1954.

Cases for abandonment, larceny and violating the State Motor Vehicle Law were next in line. There were 667 abandonment cases, 538 larceny cases and 519 persons charged with vehicle law offenses.

There were 438 cases of battery, seeking support of illegitimate children from the purported fathers, and 435 cases of being intoxicated on public highways—public places or in residences.

'SHINE CRACKDOWN

Crackdowns on violators also brought large case increases in violations of the State Liquor Control Act and the State Employment Security Law. There were 694 liquor offenses, compared to 691 in 1954, and 102 cases on unemployment compensation against only 27 the previous year.

The figures showed a decline in cases for attempted burglary, wife beating, neglect of children and stabbing.

A breakdown on offenders by ages showed 7,861 males and 937 females. These included 3,669 white men, 4,192 Negro men, 249 white women and 688 Negro women.

AGE GROUPS

Largest number of the offenses occurred in the age groups of 22 through 43. There were 3,301 offenders between 22 and 32 and 2,475 between 33 and 43. Next highest were the age groups of 16-21, and 44-54.

The figures also showed an increase in collections for the support of children. Through Dec. 1, $519,327.25 was collected through the Adult Probation Office on abandonment and $188,156.99 for illegitimate children.

Total collections on both these offenses in 1947 amounted to only $243,942.

Francescatti Is Inspired In Difficult Violin Concert

Zino Francescatti's performance at the Municipal Auditorium Monday night was an inspired display of violinist virtuosity.

Passages demanding the ultimate in technique only seemed to spur him on, and he demonstrated an intimacy with a repertoire ranging from Bach to Shostakovich.

Francescatti's choice of an opening number, the Beethoven "Sonata in G Major," was a happy one, for the work has great warmth and lyricism. Under the artist's trained fingers, a rich tone poured from the violin.

Beethoven was followed by Mozart, the "Concerto in D Major," more stately in form but fairly bursting with romantic lyricism. Here Francescatti found a showpiece for his marvelous phrasing and dynamics.

Perhaps the most spectacular feat of the evening was Francescatti's performance of two selections from Bach's B Minor Partita for unaccompanied violin, a vigorous work taxing a violinist's energies as well as his abilities.

Again in Sarasate's "Zapateado," he fairly exploded in a blaze of musical fireworks. It is a piece requiring the ultimate in facile fingering, and Francescatti was more than equal to the task.

The later half of the evening's program was made up of shorter works.

Francescatti proved himself a great showman as well as a great artist—swaying with lyric passages, standing militarily erect for more formal parts and leaning over his instrument at times as if to coax forth some new miracle of sound.

Indeed it would have been a perfect performance were it not for something beyond the artist's control: the barnlike auditorium whirled, groaned, rattled and emitted a high-pitched squeal from an unknown source.—BRUCE GALPHIN.

Dalton Man Gets Life in Slaying Of Ala. Waitress

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 9 —A Georgia electrician was sentenced to life in prison today after pleading guilty to the first degree strangulation murder of a local waitress.

Jesse B. Taylor, 30, of Dalton, Ga., was convicted of strangling to death 27-year-old Clois Hill in a parked car at Bessemer, then taking her body to a lonely spot near Dalton and dumping it; in a nearby mail box he left a note that read, "She was killed in Bessemer, Ala."

Taylor, who admitted the crime in a signed confession, originally pleaded innocent.

WOMAN'S ORDEAL

Fleeing Boy Takes Over, Wrecks Car

A teen-ager in a blue beret and sweater late Monday commandeered a passing auto to escape from two other youths, wrecked the machine, and shook up and frightened a young housewife and her two daughters.

Mrs. Julia Anderson, of 530 Morgan St., NE, told police she was driving along State street at Fifth street, NW, with her two small daughters when the youth ran in front of the car.

Mrs. Anderson quickly applied brakes. Patrolmen C. H. Wade and R. C. Stevens said they were told the youth ran around the car, opened the door, shoved Mrs. Anderson aside and drove on.

The two youths pursuing him continued to chase the car on foot.

The driver made a left turn into Fifth street and after two blocks made a right turn into Plum street. Officers said he ran the car into a chain stretched across Plum street where the street dead ends into a parking lot.

Then, officers said, he leaped out and fled across the parking lot.

Mrs. Anderson and her two children were not seriously injured, officers said.

Damage to the auto was estimated at $200.

Washable Cottons In Revue

Designer Hope Reed has come through again with a new line of inexpensive cottons, which will be shown in a fashion show here Tuesday.

There will be a great variety in fabrics and colors. Irish linens will be shown, along with pima cottons and unusual prints, a complete line of dresses utilizing the permanently pleated cottons, and two gold-figured prints from India, one with a turquoise background, one with black. Both of the latter are in smooth, luxurious cotton.

All the dresses shown are washable.

Bob Russell will emcee the show and has composed the music and songs for it.

Miss Southland of 1956, Miss Carol Woods of Birmingham, will be the star model of the show. Modeling with Miss Woods will be seven local models.

A highlight of the accessorizing will be a pair of black patent shoes with aluminum heels. This is the first time this shoe has been shown. The heel is high and very slim.

The fashions to be shown are available in Atlanta. For shopping information call WA. 5050, Ext. 394.

There's Back Interest In the Styles for '56

By MARY GRAY ANDERSON
Constitution Fashion Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—After a preview showing of the cream of silk fashions chosen from the spring and summer lines of many designers, the New York couture press shows began individual designer shows Monday morning.

One highlighting feature of the international silk preview was the showing of silk costumes being worn in the movie "The Swan." The movie is now being filmed with Grace Kelly as the star. MGM had the gowns flown to New York especially for the occasion.

The first showing on Monday morning was the Harry Frechtel collection of coats and suits for spring. It was pointed out in this collection that the coat length in suits generally runs from 20 to 25 inches, with the majority being in the shorter lengths.

SLEEVE LENGTH

Almost without fail the sleeve length in suit jackets is three-quarter in collections shown thus far. The waistline in jackets has been eased. There are many boxed jackets with the little boy look, and a scattering of bolero jackets.

Skirts are straight for the most part with kick or inverted pleats to make walking a little easier. When skirts are full they most often get their fullness by means of deep inverted pleatings all around, which gives the skirt a more slimmed-down look than simply gathering the fullness.

Frechtel, as the other designers, featured many costume suits. And more often than in the past few years the skirt, blouse and jacket matches. Whether it is in a tweed or a solid color the blouse will be of the same material as the skirt.

Fabric plays a big role in the Frechtel collection. Silk is combined with almost everything . . . cotton, wool and synthetics . . . giving all fabrics a crispness and wonderful texture interest. Many fabrics have taken on three-dimensional quality. Silk tweeds will be one of your most important spring fabrics.

SUIT-MINDED

The Paul Parnes collection, designed by Beni Claire, is very suit-minded to the point that what might be called a dress looks like a suit because he will add a bolero jacket that strikes the shoulder blades in length.

In fact, a new high has been hit in the costume that can be worn many ways. One model came out wearing the petite jacket backwards, and no one would have known the difference if the commentator hadn't called attention to it.

But this is no reflection on Paul Parnes' clothes. So much of the trimming, such as bows, buttons and flaps, is being put on the back side of clothes by all designers for this spring and summer that until women grow accustomed to it they'll all probably have a tendency to turn things around.

Parnes gives his clothes many unusual touches. Many of his dresses and suits employ crisp and airy organdy over-collars and cuffs. Sometimes the organdy is pleated. He uses little tabs or flaps on the sleeves and repeats them on the front of the jacket. And a great many of his suits and dresses have various intriguing little details, subtly, but definitely, drawing attention to bodice shaping.

TABBED FOLDS

Tabbed folds of fabric, curving bands, rhinestone and pearl pins, and crescent pockets are seen on dresses, and sometimes as a link between the dress and its jacket.

Prints get free rein in this collection, from dresses to suit-ensembles to long coat ensembles. One of these, a wide-neck sheath dress in a royal blue dappled silk, has a straight royal blue wool coat lined with the fabric of the dress. The dress is beltless, as most of his dresses, and has tiny sleeves, and deep rounded patch pockets to match those on the coat.

Another stresses the three-quarter sleeve length in a slimmed box jacket of pale wheat rodier wool. Print is picked up in a navy and white dotted silk blouse with a bow tied neckline. The blouse buttons to a navy worsted slim skirt.

WHITE ORGANDY, PIQUE DICKEYS

The Pattullo-Jo Copeland collection is a collection with many white organdy and pique dicky for suits and dresses. Coats and dresses have floating panels, and afternoon dresses are tiered with ruffles. Even the suit skirts sometimes have floating panels in back.

On a gray sheer wool dress the skirt panels, numbering about four all the way around, are tied on like an apron with the bow in the back. A brown, black and rose "brocade" print short sheath dinner dress has a floating panel from the back of the waist. This dress has a bolero jacket of the same print. This cites only two of many examples.

These are the tricks Jo Copeland is using to give an eased look to the straight and sheath silhouette. Another is a black and white checked worsted coat dress that buttons down the front, and ties with gentle shaping in the back. The collar and three-quarter sleeves are cuffed with white silk faille.

Come Home For Spanking

You'd never suspect the Russians of naivete, but one of the most novel stories I've run across lately makes our Red friends sound like a bunch of starry-eyed little dreamers.

An Estonia-born lieutenant at Ft. Benning, who escaped from his native land with his parents in 1943, has been "invited" by the Russian Communists to come back and "serve a reduced sentence for crimes against Russia."

In effect the Reds are saying, "Dear Son, come home and get your head bashed in."

John Gause of the Benning public information office talked to Second Lt. Juri Toomepuu (pronounced Yu-di Tom-a-pu) about the matter.

"Lt. Toomepuu's reaction to the surprise letter," reported Gause, "was all-American. He said, 'Phooey!'"

In the first place the young officer was but 13 when he and his parents and two other children left Estonia. They fled to Sweden where they lived three years and where he joined the Swedish merchant fleet as a seaman and eventually worked his way to America. He didn't have the foggiest idea what his crime against Russia could be.

"I suspect it is high treason," he suggested cheerfully. "I hope so, anyway."

The letter from the Russians accused Toomepuu of "living in miserable conditions as a slave of a capitalist regime." But oddly enough the young officer, who is on active duty as a National Guardsman from New York and who received his commission after serving in Korea, is very well satisfied with the horrible conditions in this capitalistic regime.

"I'm going to remain a soldier in this regime because America is a great country . . . and because I want to be a soldier when the Communists are run out of Estonia," he told Gause.

When he completes his infantry course in February he expects to return to City College of New York to complete a final semester in political science.

Although he is content with conditions in his adopted capitalistic country, the young Estonian cannot forget his native country. His father-in-law, also an Estonian who now makes his home in Oregon, also received an "invitation" from the Russians and, like Toomepuu will ignore it.

Except there's this about it. Such letters will inevitably bring back memories of the little Baltic country and sharpen the details of the long-ago Communist encirclement and the flight by night to a strange land. Their new lives, no matter how happy, can't wipe out all the old memories and old loyalties.

The young officer now in Georgia hopes some day to see a rebirth of his tiny homeland. He believes that Americans, when they become aware of conditions in Russia, will want to help Estonia regain her freedom.

Gause asked him if he felt it would be safe to give the facts of his life to newspapers, realizing the possibility of reprisals against Toomepuu's relatives still behind the Iron Curtain.

Toomepuu's reply was the most poignant comment of all on the Russian letter.

"No," he said, "they are all dead."

Annie Lou Hardy Junior League Plans Old-Fashioned Revue

Because the Atlanta Junior League celebrates its 40th birthday this year, the program at the meeting to be held this morning at the Driving Club will honor the sustaining members, namely, those who have reached the age of 40.

And what fun the girls have had in planning the program! After a brief history of the league, a fashion revue will be given by daughters of sustaining members, wearing costumes unearthed from attic trunks and cedar chests which their mothers wore when they participated actively in league work.

Such ensembles as those worn when the league operated a tea room, when it gave a ball or sponsored a golf match, when it held "store day" or worked for the Red Cross. Beginning in 1916, the parade of costumes will present the latest styles of each period up to the present day.

Mrs. Perry Ballard is chairman in charge of the revue, and Mrs. Douglas Connah will serve as commentator. Mrs. George Hightower wrote the clever script for the presentation.

A FORMER ATLANTAN here for a brief visit is Mrs. Irving Scheppe of West Hartford, Conn., who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Charles T. Pottinger, and Mr. Pottinger on Rivers road. Arriving Sunday, Mrs. Scheppe stopped here en route to Houston, Tex., for a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Dudley Sharp Jr. and Mr. Sharp. She leaves today for Houston.

OTHER FORMER ATLANTANS arriving Sunday were Mrs. Charles C. McGeehe and her son, Charles C. McGeehe Jr. of Savannah, who are guests at the Georgian Terrace.

A VISITOR EXPECTED this week at the Sherwood Forest home of Mr. and Mrs. Sims Bray is the latter's cousin, Walter G. Cady, a California scientist.

MR. AND MRS. WALTER D. TAULMAN will return this week from Redington Beach, Fla., where they have spent the past two weeks at their winter home.

ATLANTANS WHO TOOK OFF for Florida as soon as Santa Claus had put in his annual appearance are returning daily. Mr. and Mrs. Luther Randall, who drove down the west coast and made the circuit by way of the east coast, returned last week to their W. Paces Ferry road home. Mr. and Mrs. Milton Hall are also back home after spending two weeks at Miami. The Ralph Kerkleys, who took their young son and daughter, John and Kay, for a two-week vacation tour of the state, have returned to their home on Dellwood drive.

THE DAUGHTER BORN JAN. 8 to Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Griffith has been named Nancy. Mrs. Griffith, the former Helen Candler, and her daughter are at Crawford Long Hospital.

MISS EVELYN MCGARRITY, who will appear as guest soloist with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra this evening, will be honor guest at a party after the concert, the affair to be given at the Joseph Habersham DAR chapter house on 15th street.

HOSPITAL NOTES—Mrs. George Floyd is recovering from an attack of pneumonia at Piedmont Hospital.

MRS. JACK D. SHAW has returned to her home on Peachtree road after spending the last four months in Kentucky, during which time she recuperated from an operation. She divided her visit between her mother, Mrs. Edward F. Kaiser, in Louisville and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kaiser, in Anchorage.

EILEEN SCHAUER, who appeared as guest soloist with the Symphony Orchestra on Sunday afternoon, was a guest for the weekend at the Dinkler Plaza.

Overeating Spoils Fun And Figure

By IDA JEAN KAIN

It's a great day in the life of an overweight when she wakes up and decides to take a completely fresh approach to reducing. The technique is to think what sheer joy it will be to once again be able to slip into a size 14 or 16—free from that burden of fat binding muscle and spirit. Take that slant and you realize that overeating isn't worth giving up all the things that let you feel buoyantly alive. Suddenly you are wonderfully ready for slimming action.

Once you recognize that overeating is spoiling your fun as well as your figure, you look upon the science of nutrition as a life saver, and eating to lose weight as a pleasure. Then you're on the happy road to more bounce and a better figure... you won't want fattening foods.

THREE BALANCED MEALS

To apply nutrition science, eat three balanced meals a day so the calories will be used for energy. When the bulk of calories are taken at the evening meal, more of them are stored for the simple reason that the day's activities are over. Calories taken in excess of immediate energy needs are stored in the solid form of fat.

So eat breakfast — it's slimming! Oh, not two doughnuts or sweet rolls and coffee, that's just carbohydrates and stimulation. Have fruit, an egg, a slice of toast and coffee. That is nutrition to go on, and fewer calories than the carbohydrate breakfast.

Have a light but satisfying lunch. If possible, have something hot. Include one protein food — cheese, fish, meat or another egg, to stick to the ribs and stimulate metabolism. Have something chewy, melba toast, or a crisp, crunchy salad. The very act of chewing is satisfying.

PLENTY OF MILK

Have a pint of skim milk or buttermilk every day. It is filling, not fattening, and it acts as a buffer to the nerves.

Dinner at night can be a good meal and reducing. If you dine out and order pot roast, for example, specify without gravy, otherwise it will be swimming in several hundred calories. Have one starch, two vegetables and a light dessert, preferably fruit, or cheese and crackers. Almost any meal can be within 450 calories if the trimmings are deleted.

Do not eat to belt pressing proportions. Ten minutes away from the meal you will feel perfectly happy and not hungry.

Mothers Club

The Kappa Alpha Theta Mothers Club will meet Thursday, Jan. 12, at 11 a.m., at the home of Mrs. E. Fred Greene, 1854 Broadwell St., SW.

NURSES suggest DOUCHING WITH ZONITE

FOR FEMINE HYGIENE!

Brides-to-Be and Married Women Should Know These Intimate Facts Every well-informed woman who values her health, physical charm and married happiness, knows how necessary a cleansing, deodorizing douche is for intimate feminine cleanliness and after monthly periods.

It's a great assurance for women to know that ZONITE is so highly thought of among these nurses. Scientific tests proved no other type liquid, antiseptic-germicide for the douche of all those tested is so POWERFULLY EFFECTIVE yet so SAFE to body tissues.

ZONITE's Many Advantages

ZONITE is a powerful antiseptic-germicide yet is positively non-poisonous, non-irritating. You can use it as often as needed without the slightest risk of injury. A ZONITE douche immediately washes away germs and waste deposits. It effectively deodorizes and leaves you with a wonderful sense of well-being and confidence. Inexpensive—ZONITE costs only a few pennies per douche. Use as directed.

If any abnormal condition exists, see your doctor.

LOOK OUT FOR BUNIONS!

CHICAGO (Special) — Bunions are not only painful—but actually may be dangerous!

Bunions, the ugly swollen hump on the joint of the great toe, are formed as nature hurries to protect the joint by layer after layer of cell growth. As the bunion grows larger, pressure and irritation increase. Often the pain becomes intense, and the hump becomes the focal point for breeding germs and bacteria. If pus-infection sets in, neglect may be dangerous.

Now comes the news of a home treatment called "Fairfoot" which has the ability to ease pressure, relieve pain quickly, bring comfort to the sore, swollen hump. This treatment is ready for instant use—safe, harmless.

To acquaint readers of this paper with this home treatment, FAIRFOOT will mail a FREE sample to anyone who requests it. Just send your name and address to: FAIRFOOT, 1223 So. Wabash Avenue, Dept. X-211, Chicago 5, Ill. A postcard will do.

YOUTH IS WONDERFUL

'Peter Pan' Proves TV Growing Up, Not Mary

By JACK GOULD

(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9—Lovely, wonderful thoughts went out over television tonight. Mary Martin, in all her radiant enchantment, returned as "Peter Pan" once again brought to a viewer's home the joys of youth and make believe. The TV screen was the happiest and warmest place in town.

When "Peter Pan" was first seen on television on March 7 of last year, it was hailed as a turning point in video's evolution; surely, that was no exaggeration. For tonight the production again had that electrifying excitement of theater at its most finished and, above all, that contagious esprit that joins player and audience in a sublime escape from reality.

Miss Martin? She was the beguiling sprite of neverland—flying through the air and making it seem such heavenly fun, romping through the forests with a twinkle in her eye, doing in the villainous

Captain Hook and his awful pirates, and imploring us all to restore Tinker Bell to glowing health. She made sure that for two hours no one would grow up. As Captain Hook, Cyril Ritchard was all that could be asked—frolicking through those wild chases with immense style and manner and enjoying himself hugely. Others in the production—Sondra Lee, as Tiger Lily; Cathy Nolan, as Wendy; Heller Halliday, Miss Martin's daughter, as Liza, and the magnificent children—were equally helpful in sustaining the melodic lark.

The second showing enabled

REGAL ATTIRE—Jack Bailey, emcee on the new NBC-TV daytime show, "Queen for a Day," dons the royal vestments as he and Marilyn Burtis clown before the show goes on the air. Each day (WSB-TV at 4:30 p.m.) a "Queen" is chosen from the audience. Her prize is a dizzy whirl of Hollywood.

CHANNEL CHUCKLES

"But, dear, nobody can really fly. 'Peter Pan' is just a story."

the viewer to appreciate more fully the extraordinarily inventive direction and choreography of Jerome Robbins. His little touches and inspired "business" are vital parts of the evening's delight.

"Peter Pan" was broadcast in color. Those fortunate to have sets were truly blessed. The tints were beautiful and, particularly in the scenes in the forest and on the deck of the pirate ship, greatly added to the sense of vibrantly alive theater.

Prior to tonight's performance there were some printed reports that Miss Martin might not do further performances of "Peter Pan" on television because of the exhausting demands of the role. Miss Martin grow old? Never, never.

RKO Gets Film Rights To 'Lady and Prowler'

(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.) HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Jan. 9—RKO today snapped up movie rights to "The Lady and the Prowler," performed Friday on CBS-TV's Climax.

The studio had an inside track to the property because its production chief, William Dozier, originally purchased the drama for television seven months ago.

Blue Chips Falter On Late Selloff

Largest Dip in 3 Months; Dow-Jones Declines $5.94

NEW YORK, Jan. 9 (AP)—Prices tumbled in a late flurry of selling in the stock market today and many blue chips were clipped for sizable losses. It was the biggest drop in three months.

The market started higher and then began to slip. In the last hour a sudden burst of selling took prices down sharply. However, there was a good recovery from the lows, and the market worked to a quiet but lower finish.

The Dow-Jones industrial average suffered a drop of $5.94 and finished at 479.74.

All sections of the list were engulfed by the slide but steel, motors, aircraft and railroads were sold freely.

The market in recent weeks has been fluctuating near its record peak but hasn't been able to break through to a new high. It was felt in Wall Street that failure of the market to make progress might create enough bearishness to press prices down sharply.

That happened today. When the selling got going, there was a rush to unload. Selling orders placed just under the market to insure profits were triggered, and this added to the volume.

Those who are bullish about the market's future were quick to point out the selling was absorbed today without evidence of acute weakness.

Another factor in today's decline was the realization in Wall Street that automobile sales are easing and the consequent demand for steel for the motor industry is diminishing. Early selling in both of those divisions was ascribed to that situation.

After the close of the market Henry Ford told investment bankers he didn't look for a good year in 1956 for the Ford Co. He made the statement as a caution to the public not to expect fast profits in buying the new issue of Ford stock due to be sold Jan. 18.

Cotton Surge Climbs to $2

NEW YORK, Jan. 9 (AP)—Cotton futures advanced today as traders generally took a favorable reaction to the President's farm message to Congress. Final prices were 15 cents to $2 a bale higher.

Commission house and New Orleans buying extended gains to as much as $1.10 a bale during the morning and following the farm message the market tacked on additional gains. Several of the proposals, such as the soil bank and payments in cash or commodities for additional acreage cuts below present restriction, had been anticipated by traders.

Traders were particularly impressed by a proposal that acreage allotments in cotton be replaced with quantity allotments as a move which would reach to the core of the cotton surplus problem.

Atlanta Spot Cotton

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 9 (AP)—Cotton futures advanced here Monday on trade buying to fix prices and short covering. Closing prices were steady 10 cents to $2 a bale higher.

Grains Show Nervous Tone

CHICAGO, Jan. 9 (AP)—A nervous market with many close currents developed in grains on the Board of Trade today following the President Eisenhower's farm message.

Various grains moved in different directions as the market tried to digest the many proposals contained in the President's message. Wheat and rye were easier, soybeans moved up, but corn prices were up about a cent from the lows.

One feature of the President's proposals which attracted trade attention was the recommendation Congress consider setting a dollar limit on the size of price support loans.

This had more influence on wheat than anything else as it is in this grain that the country has most of its big volume reserves. Presumably, they would have wheat which would not be available for the government loan—in that case it would have to be sold on the free market.

Dry Goods

NEW YORK, Jan. 9 (AP)—The cotton textile market was steady but quiet Monday. There was some scattered selling of print cloths and broadcloths for second quarter delivery. In wool goods, mills reported moderate orders for full wools and worsteds. The Sydney wool market re-opened, following a holiday recess, with prices unchanged to per cent higher compared with last previous sales in December, according to private Australian advice. In rayon goods, selling of filament and spun goods was slow. According to market reports, there was less pressure of resale fabric in the market.

The Argentine Branches, like all other commercial banks in Argentina, by law receive and pay deposits only as Agent of the Central Bank of the Argentine Republic, and The First National Bank of Boston has no liability to depositors there. Such funds are included in "Deposits," inasmuch as the Branches serve them as Agent. The offsetting account with the Argentine Central Bank, less liability to that bank for funds utilized in conducting the banking business under Argentine law, is contained in "Cash and Due from Banks."

21 INCH DIAGONAL MEASUREMENT PHILCO TV

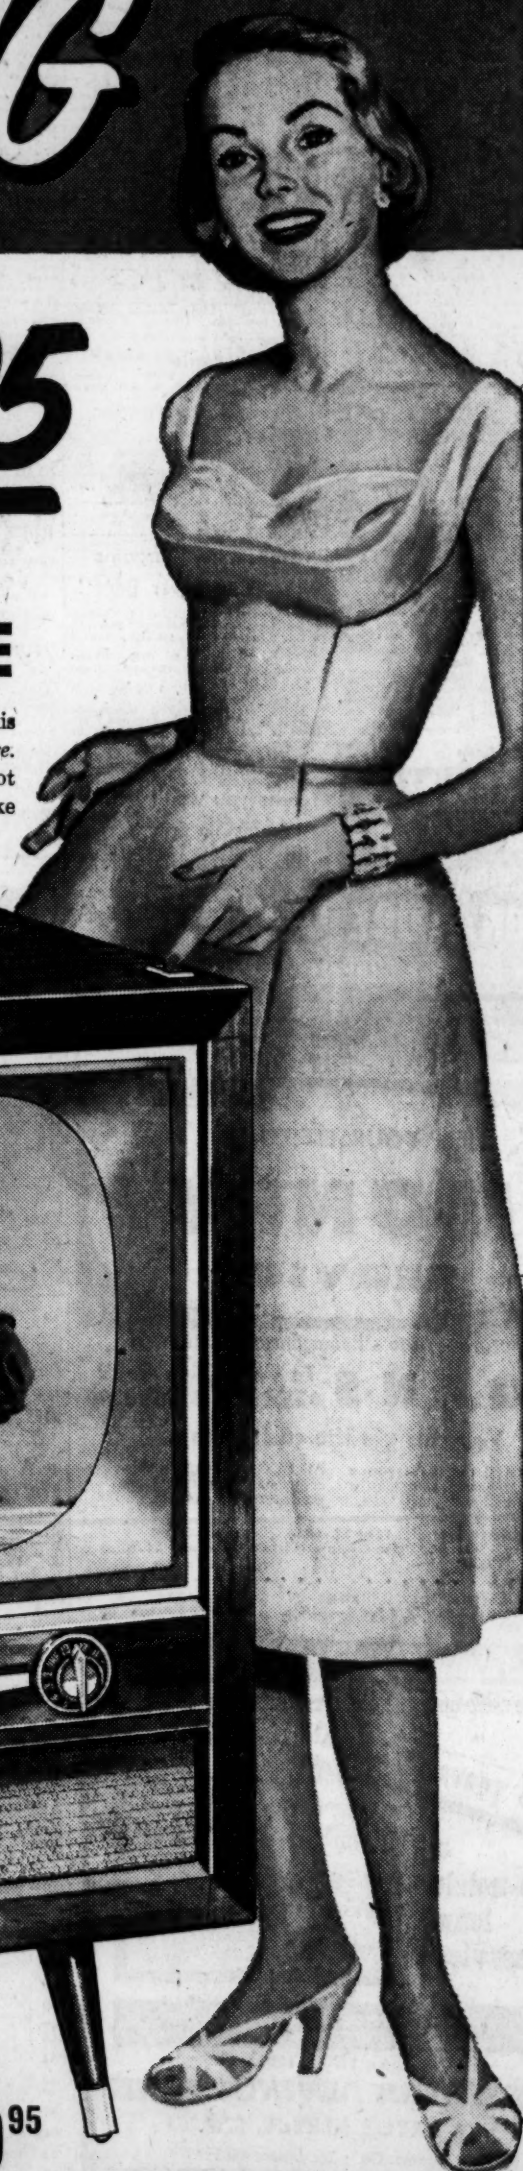

WITH AUTOMATIC
TOP TOUCH TUNING

NOW ONLY $199⁹⁵

...$90 LESS THAN BEFORE

The TV sensation of the year is Philco Top Touch Tuning. Now you can enjoy this sensational advance at new low prices... think of it, as much as $90.00 LESS than before. Brand new models in dark or light finish cabinets! New decorator-inspired styling! Not 14-inch... not 17-inch, but 21-inch diagonal measurement Photo-Perfect pictures like the Model 4033-G, shown at left, which is also available with Remote Control.

AT THE SET... OR BY REMOTE CONTROL Just a touch...

there's your station!

A touch on top turns the set on. A touch changes stations. A touch turns it off. Or by Remote Control you can sit back in your easy chair and just a touch changes stations. It's all automatic!

EXTRA POWER

For Peak Reception on All Stations

Philco for 1956 is the performance champion of the TV world, thanks to new engineering discoveries, like the ones shown below.

New Micro-Grid Tuner
With miracle X-155 tube. Breaks all records for snow-free reception in difficult TV areas.

PHILCO 6126-M

PHILCO 4139

Magnetic Ring Focuser
With other Philco developments, makes possible TV's first Photo-Perfect picture, unmatched for clarity and true-to-life realism.

"Miss America" TV
Giant 335 rectangular square inch screen housed in cabinet of Mahogany veneers. Plus twin speakers and Built-In Aerial.

New Swivelet
Richly-styled cabinet turns to left or right for easy viewing. Available in dark or light finish. Self-leveling feet. Built-In Aerial.

Deluxe Console

To harmonize with finest Mahogany furniture, Philco has designed the model 4153 with 21-inch diagonally measured picture. In addition to Top Touch Tuning, it's also available with Remote Control, and with All-Channel UHF Tuner.

$279⁹⁵

All Philco TV Prices include Federal Tax and One Year Picture Tube Warranty
